Optimism in Detroit
Mr. Ford Goes Upstairs
Would Canada Trade?
A Double Cheer

—By Arthur Brisbane—

DETROIT, MICH., May 27—There ARE signs of cheerfulness, although 12,000,000 unemployed may find the statement hard to believe.

There was cheerfulness in the Grand Central station leaving New York Thursday.

A railroad man walked the full length of the platform to tell you that the Twentieth Century, the Ohio State Limited, the Wolverine, the Lake Shore Limited, the Niagara and the Mount Royal Limited are all running in two sections.

Within six hours, 12 long double-section trains pulling out of one station. That's cheerful, and new.

"The one fare plus a quarter round trip" explains part of it. The Pennsylvania and other roads report similar improved traffic conditions. When railroads bring themselves up to date and carry 30 passengers 125 miles an hour in cars weighing 15,000 pounds instead of carrying 20 passengers 40 miles an hour in cars weighing 180,000 pounds, the public will travel, and railroads will make more money than they ever made, at less than half the present fare.

The Federal Reserve Bank report that Detroit stores lead in sales gain for April means little, due to the fact that Detroit in its bank moratorium was hit harder and for a longer time than any other city.

What does mean a great deal is the fact that Mr. Oscar Webber, head of the Hudson Company and recognized among merchants as one of the ablest in the United States, takes a cheerful view of conditions and the improvement for the month of May.

Detroit depends largely for prosperity, spending money and wages on the automobile industry, and the improvement that Mr. Webber sees written in his sales report means a corresponding improvement in Detroit's greatest industry and its payrolls.

A good deal of Detroit is away in Chicago for the exposition opening today. Practically all of General Motors, Mr. Sloan, Mr. Knudson, Mr. Klingler, Mr. Grant, Mr. Kettering, have gone to open the General Motors building on the Lake front.

Henry Ford was at Dearborn, to receive at luncheon Mr. G. F. D. Assis Brasil, and members of his family. Mr. Brasil, who came from Brazil to discuss with President Roosevelt matters important to both countries, is Brazilian ambassador to the Argentine.

He came accompanied by his son and his charming wife and daughter. Going upstairs on his way to the dining room, Henry Ford, absent-mindedly whistling, went up three steps at a time, a considerable feat for a man of 70, who has recently undergone a severe operation.

To a fat man, who said, "If I did that, I could not breathe for half an hour," Mr. Ford replied, "And if I were you, I would keep on doing it until you could breathe."

Mr. Ford's luncheon party included M. C. Meigs, vice-president of the American Weekly, who knows more about old fashioned steam engines than anybody except Henry Ford.

Also present were Edsel Ford and W. C. Cowling, whose business is distributing automobiles after the Ford organization makes them.

The Hon. Gus Kasch, in the Ohio Legislature, has interesting "trades" in mind. He would have Uncle Sam trade all of Alaska for "the islands south of the center of the St. Lawrence" and he would have England cancel her war debt to us and give us Canada instead of cash.

Can you imagine the enthusiasm in Canada when the news spreads, considering that Canada has in the ground more than enough gold to pay that war debt, to say nothing of silver, nickel, iron and the Lord knows what.

As for Alaska, there is no knowing how much wealth is hidden away there.

It would, however, be a good idea if Canada would annex, the United States then let Mexico annex them both and run the whole thing on a "majority vote" basis.

Another Detroiter with reasons for cheerfulness is James Hammond, publisher of W. R. Hearst's Detroit Times. His advertising for May thus far shows an increase of 120,000 lines over last year, whereas the advertising of his evening competitor has decreased 196,000 lines.

The Detroit Times carries almost as many lines of advertising as both of the other Sunday papers put together, and has "the biggest Sunday circulation in Michigan."

Rain Lifts Ban on Fishing in Maine

Augusta, Me., May 27 (AP)—A state-wide rain today "temporarily stopped" Forest Commissioner Neil L. Violette from asking Governor Louis J. Brann to declare a closed time on fishing except from boats, and to prohibit the building of fires in the woods.

DIVER HUNTS BODIES IN QUARRY

Blood Stains on Auto Cushion Indicate a Quincy Tragedy

Human bloodstains on an auto seat cushion, found in a pool in the abandoned Djerfa quarry, off Quarry st., West Quincy, led police today to hire a diver to go to the bottom of the water, 120 feet deep, tomorrow morning to search for an auto and bodies.

Accused of several hundred gallons of gasoline, which they poured on the surface of the water, this afternoon and were rewarded with with the sight of oil coming to the surface, proving an auto was in the deep pool, police said.

At the same time, police searchers found more blood stains on rocks and soil in the vicinity of the quarry.

Lieut. John J. Avery of Quincy police revealed that secret investigation had been going on for several days.

What appeared to be blood was noticed on edge of the quarry several days ago. Yesterday the auto seat cushion and a tire were found in the water. Nothing was said about it by police until they received an official report from Dr. George E. Bolling, Brockton city bacteriologist, that there was human blood on the cushion.

Saplings on the quarry side have been smashed, indicating the descent of an auto. Efforts to probe the depths of the pool with a powerful light failed.

STOCKS RISE IN BUYING WAVE

BULLETIN

Washington, May 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt today authorized the board of trustees of the Postal Savings Bank to purchase $100,000,000 in government bonds.

The move is in line with the open market operations recently inaugurated by the Federal Reserve Board to bring about expansion of credit and an easing of the money market.

New York, May 27—A smashing rally in stocks, a boom for commodities and a sharp dip by dollar exchange today measured the reaction of financial markets to proposed erasure of the gold clause from public and private debts totaling roughly one hundred billion dollars.

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange, where prices rose $1 to about $10, neared record-breaking volume for a Saturday. At 12 o'clock noon, closing time, the ticker was 41 minutes behind the actual market. Sales were 4,000,000 shares.

Wheat, up around 3 cents a bushel when trading began at Chicago, was holding most of its advance as the closing gong rang on the Stock Exchange.

New York cotton, climbing to the highest level since last August, finished with net gains of 85 to $1.10 a bale.

Speculators in silver pushed that metal sharply higher, the spot quotation being 34½ cents an ounce, up ¼ cent, while futures rose more than a cent.

The May sugar delivery on the Coffee and Sugar Exchange sold at 1.71 cents a pound, the best price in three and a half years. Sugar futures closed with moderate gains. Lead touched 4 cents a pound, highest since 1931.

The Tax Racket

IGNORANCE armed with votes, inspired by demagogy and officered by political cowardice, is a hard army to rout.

Up to date it has held the field in Congress against all attempts to reform federal taxation and to put it upon a just and intelligent basis.

But, at last, appearances indicate that the lines of Congressional obstinacy are beginning to waver. Stupidity finds itself surrounded by facts. Realities are always terrifying to fakirs.

The poor old income tax, like a galled and jaded steed, is ready to drop in its tracks. It can no longer respond, even by the twitch of a muscle, to the whip of the political hack, who has foolishly taken a position against the sales tax, and has no "out" except the pretense—and he knows it is only a pretense—of increasing the income tax.

* * *

THE INCOME TAX HAS BROKEN DOWN.

This can no longer be disputed. As a source of revenue it has reached the last stage of dilapidation—the higher its rates, the less its yield.

Theoretically, as well as in point of results, it has passed out of the field of practical revenue measures.

In addition, it has become hateful to the people. It reeks with scandal and oppression.

A wave of public anger is rising throughout the country, not only against the tax for its infamous partiality to the rich and its cruel injustice to the average man, but against the government, which is more and more identified in the popular mind with the contemptible methods employed in its assessment and collection.

The disclosures before the Senate committee which is investigating the House of Morgan show how our rich and powerful citizens methodically, and with claim of legality, avoid the payment of income tax and snap their fingers at the so-called rigors of the law.

Not so with the small merchant or the modest professional man who makes honest return to the government of his unpretentious gains. He does not snap his fingers at the law. He cannot afford skilled lawyers, primed in the loop-holes of the law and knowing where its secret exits lie.

* * *

NO field agents memorandum, waiving verification, accompanies his honestly compiled return. The revenue department's agent pounces on him like a hawk, demanding production of all his books and vouchers. For days and perhaps weeks he is under the harrow of taunts, unconceaded skepticism and insulting interrogation.

There is no presumption, as with the Morgan returns, of his good faith. He finds all the experience and ingenuity of the government arrayed against him. He is accused of duplicities of which

WIRE Your Senators

Write or wire your Senators at once urging them to vote for a manufacturers' sales tax to raise the revenue needed by the government. TRIAL BOARD FINDS PAIR GUILTY

Waldron and Cohen Lose Jobs as a Result of Tire Shop Break

Dismissal from the Boston police department was ordered this afternoon by Commissioner Hultman for Patrolmen Michael V. Waldron and Ralph Cohen, arrested a week ago today on the charge of breaking into the Kelly Springfield Tire Co. store, 618 Commonwealth ave.

The board of three captains which tried the men yesterday in City Hospital, where Waldron is a patient with a broken ankle, reported a finding of guilty on all charges for both men, to Commissioner Hultman today.

The board recommended dismissal and the commissioner, concurring in full with the findings, sent word to Station 16, Back Bay, to which the men were attached, to notify them immediately.

At the police trial Waldron was charged with untruthfulness, with being a defendant in a criminal case, and with having in his possession a key to a building on his route and another key to the station 16 gasoline pump, contrary to regulations.

Cohen was charged with untruthfulness, leaving his route and being a defendant in a criminal case.

Waldron, who lives in Brighton, has a wife and six children. Cohen lives in South Boston, is married and has one child.

FIGHTING PECORA, FOR $55 A WEEK, DRIVES MORGAN TO BAY

BULL DOG TENACITY THWARTS SCORN OF MONEY PRINCES

Edwin C. Hill, radio commentator, known to millions all over America and long famous as a reporter, has joined the staff of the Evening American at the Morgan hearing in Washington.

By EDWIN C. HILL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, May 27 (INS)—This man Pecora is a warrior from warriorville. He's the Jack Dempsey of the legal prize ring. His left jab is a thing of beauty and his right swing carries the kick of a Missouri mule.

And he needs all the punch that the Lord has given him, for he is battling not only the most powerful banking house in the world, but a clique of United States senators of the very committee which is investigating that banking house — a clique which has displayed a touching and tender solicitude for the repute of the institution and the feelings of its members.

Propriety is a chancy thing, especially in these days when the world is boiling with change, political, economic and social, but this much may be ventured: If ever the great House of Morgan loses its grip on the utilities of America and the finance of America, it's members will be murmuring in their anger and chagrin the name of this Italian-born son of an immigrant, this gentleman with the bulldog tendency to get his teeth into the throat of something and hold on come hell or high water.

A LAMB IN NAME

In the language of his fathers the surname of Ferdinand Pecora, counsel at the bargain rates of $225 a month for the United States Senate committee on banking and currency, whose present task is an inquisition into the affairs and operations of the private bank of J. P. Morgan & Co., means "lamb." But never in your life would you behold a more truculent, a more combative, a more persistent and warlike lamb. If lambs are like that in Italy, what must the wolves be like?

Plain as a pike-staff is the first impression and the absolutely correct one—that he comes not to parley or to jest but to raise hell! He is not there for his amusement or for the diversion of others, even the lordly senators and the Olympian Morgan. He is there to make trouble in large scale measure. He prefers to make it for the Overman of Wall Street and his multitude of counsellors—for the high and mighty official John W. Davis of the beautiful snow-white hair and the pink and white complexion that seemingly would trade her hope of heaven for; the cold and contemptuous Whitney; the grim and unsmiling Tom Lamont; for the whole kit and bilng of the House of Morgan.

And there is a look in his eyes, as it ranges coldly around the long table, resting first upon one Senator and then another, which says as plain as words:

"If you boys want to go to the mat today, why just start something that's all, and I don't give a cuss if you are a Senator!"

Chatteringly, his frigid glance passes over the sardonic face of Senator Carter Glass of Virginia fame, who is grinning from one corner of his mouth to his neighbor, Couzens of Michigan Pecora has had several battle royals with the caustic and saw-edged Virginian and is ready to take him on again any day next week as most certainly will occur.

QUESTIONS STIR ANGER

In most every question he shoots at George Whitney or the amiable head of the United Corporation, George H. Howard, is something which is sharply provocative, deliberate or not. In almost every question he drives home is a cutting imputation of evasion, or guilt or double-dealing or something equally obnoxious and angering to the man in the witness chair.

And if an interruption there is so frequently it does come, from some senator who interposes his sacred and venerable person between the fangs of Pecora and the imperilled hide of a Morgan partner, Pecora sits back, with eyes lifted to the ceiling, eyes which fairly shout: "Oh, Lord, how long?"

And when the interruption is over and he is free to proceed again with his line of questioning, he returns, like the human bulldog that he is, to the precise topic he had previously been chewing, he had previously been chewing on.

OUT TO GET MORGAN

Mr. Pecora takes himself seriously, as he takes his profession seriously and life seriously. He is out to get Morgan and in the shortest possible time consistent with a thoroughly done task.

He got along pretty well with J. Pierpont. Obviously, it was difficult for him at first to get through his head that J. P. Morgan was actually so ignorant, or uninformed of a multitude of matters connected with J. P. Morgan & Co., which Mr. Pecora regarded as important or significant. It was hard for him at first to understand how a man could be so vague about a little matter of where twenty millions or so went. But as Pecora went he began to see the picture as it is, that J. P. Morgan, by his own statement, troubles little or not at all with the details of the firm's business, and is in virtual retirement from active business life.

But once he got that through his bulldog mind he eased up on the love and went after the lesser gods. He went, after, in especial, George Whitney, who carries in his head an astounding knowledge of the intricacies of the Morgan operations.

Morgan Partners in Debt to Firm

Washington, May 27 (AP)—Although the Senate investigation of the Morgan banking house was suspended for the week-end, the inquisitors today gave the public fresh news—that half a dozen of the 20 partners of the firm are in debt to it.

The names of the six were withnheld. The information was given to the committee in executive session by John W. Davis, attorney for the Morgan firm.

It was the old, old conflict of the aristocrat against the plebeian; the noble against the peasant, the high-born Whitney of Boston against the Sicilian son of the soil.

Day after day the duel went on between these well-matched swordsmen, with neither getting the advantage until near the close of the week; not until Pecora suddenly attacking "Sicle" Whitney with those now-celebrated lists of "close friends" of J. P. Morgan & Co. who benefited so richly from the Morgan benevolence. There was where Pecora got the decision, because Whitney for all his keenness, his swift perceptions, his mental agility and his handsome gift of language could not for the life of him explain to Pecora's satisfaction just how and why these beautiful gifts of friendship were awarded to all those men so prominent in the political, financial, industrial and social life of the country: those potential reciprocaters with the fancy names.

And for a final punch Pecora awaited Whitney with John J. Raskob and Raskob's appreciative letter to Whitney, acknowledging the favor of an allotment of stock under the market and hoping that Mr. Raskob, could someday reciprocate."

THE BANK KEEPS BOOKS

With that the elegant and extremely intelligent Whitney bowed, himself out of the witness chair and gave way to the head of one of the greatest banking companies, the United Corporation, which controls something like 22 per cent of the utilities companies of America—this Mr. George Howard who had to admit that he didn't even know who kept the books of United Corporation, but that the books were kept in the Morgan bank!

If the question is asked: "What is the shooting all about, anyway?" as good an answer as any is that so far little or nothing has been brought out which might lead either to a civil or criminal prosecution of the Morgan firm or any of its partners.

STOCK CONTROL BILL SIGNED

Washington, May 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt today signed the bill extending strict federal supervision over the issuance of new securities.

The legislation, which was recommended by the President to Congress, for the first time gives the government control of stock sales.

Administration of the law will be under the Federal Trade Commission.

Enactment of this bill brought the Roosevelt program for the extra session another big step nearer conclusion.

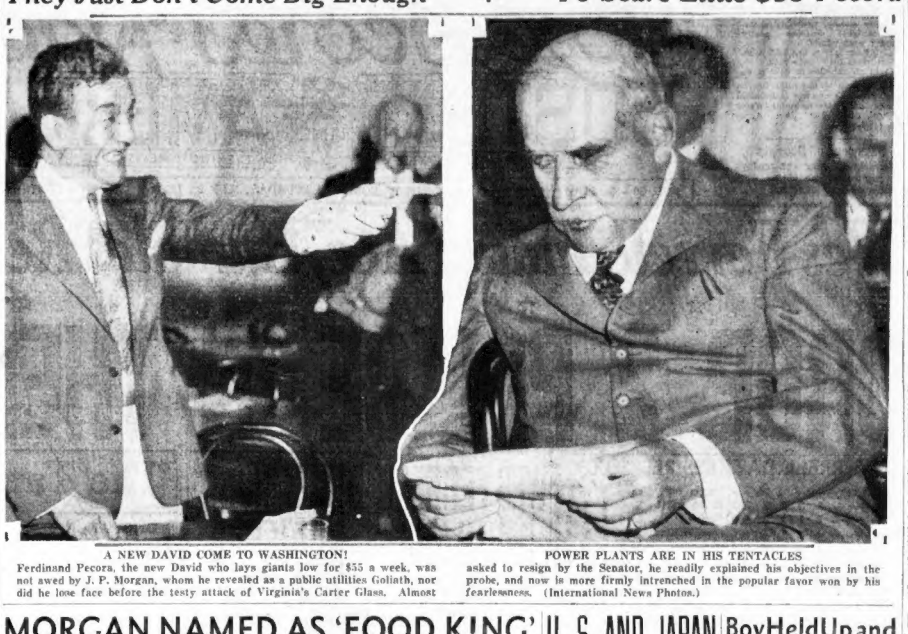
They Just Don't Come Big Enough -:- To Scare Little $55 Pecora



A NEW DAVID COME TO WASHINGTON! Ferdinand Pecora, the new David who lays giants low for $55 a week, was not awed by J. P. Morgan, whom he revealed as a public utilities Goliath, nor did he lose face before the testy attack of Virginia's Carter Glass. Almost POWER PLANTS ARE IN HIS TENTACLES asked to resign by the Senator, he readily explained his objectives in the probe, and now is more firmly intrenched in the popular favor won by his fearlessness. BANK EMPLOYE SAVES $700 IN HOLDUP

Bank Messenger Beaten Near City Hall; Robbers Escape

A bold attempt to rob a young bank messenger of a bag containing $699.35 in the busy down-town section was frustrated today although the messenger, Herbert Arlington, 20, was so badly beaten that his teeth were loosened.

As a result of his resistance to the two men who accosted him near City Hall Annex, at the junction of Court st. and Court sq., the bank messenger saved the money. The scene of the attempted robbery is near Scollay sq., where Policeman Charles Hoar was directing traffic.

The bag of money was chained to Arlington's wrist.

He refused to open the bag or give it to the thieves, one of whom felled him with a stiff blow to the jaw. As the bank messenger sprawled on the sidewalk he screamed, attracting the attention of Patrolman Hoar, who ran to the scene.

The screams frightened the thieves, who separated and ran in different directions. One ran through Franklin ave. and the other through Court ave. and escaped.

Arlington was en route from the Webster & Atlas Bank, Washington and Court sts., to Goodspeed News Co., 7 Ashburton pl., Beacon Hill, with the money at the time of the assault and attempted robbery. The thieves evidently were waiting for him as he had gone only a few steps after leaving the bank when accosted.

MORGAN NAMED AS 'FOOD KING'

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

Washington, May 27 (INS)—J. Pierpont Morgan, long regarded as an emperor of international finance, today emerged from the Senate banking inquiry as a ruler of utility and railroad empires second to none in the land.

This development was overshadowed by revelation of his methods in holding the friendship of political and business leaders by offerings of choice securities at cut-rate prices. The "favored client" lists, which included party leaders and great executives, attracted public attention, but the interest of Congress was centred on his control of utilities and railroads.

FACE NEW GRILL

Future developments at the inquiry, when it is resumed next Wednesday, will reveal his tremendous holdings in the auto business, in building materials and in trade-marked foodstuffs. He may grow from a dictator of international finance into a dictator of American industry.

The Senate inquiry has but brushed the surface of Morgan's enormous interests. It required astocks and controlled a dozen great study of the record to reveal how he achieved eminence in the utility and railroad worlds. This power, strange to the name of Morgan, was won by financing holding companies, a swift manipulation of stocks and bonds and by gradually expanding his growing empires through purchase of securities.

Morgan, the mighty, built up his railroad empire through the Allegheny Corporation, a holding company. Into it went the stocks and bonds of a half dozen railroads. It swallowed the famous Van Sweringen interests until those important brothers appeared as mere managers for the House of Morgan. A long list of political, banking and business leaders were "let in on the ground floor" of this corporation through one of the Morgan "favored client" lists.

NEW LIST OF FAVORED

His power in the utility world come through the United Corporation. It began as a holding corporation for $35,560,000 of stocks in the Mohawk Power, United Gas Improvement and Public Service of N. J.) Corporation in 1929. In three years time, it owned $600,000,000 of utility corporations in 12 different states. Now it serves 55,272,000 persons and 22 per cent of the nation's total consumption of electricity and natural gas.

Thus Morgan, the international financier, became an utility emperor. On the way up to this throne, he scattered beneficence too. There was a "favored client" list of United Corporation stock. It will be published when the hearing resumes Wednesday.

HANDLED MILLIONS

Later on, the Senate inquiry will reveal his holdings in the automotive industry, through the General Motors Corporation, in the building materials industry through the Johns-Manville Corporation and in trade-mark food products through Standard Brands, Inc. The General Motors and Johns-Manville lists will be published next week.

All this while, the House of Morgan maintained its pre-eminent position in international finance. It handled hundreds of millions of dollars in loans for foreign governments. Only a year ago, it loaned Great Britain $200,000,000 at a nice profit—the loan being scattered among 108 American banks, each of which shared in the Morgan commission.

U. S. AND JAPAN IN PEACE PLEA

Washington, May 27 (AP)—An expression of hope for peace in the Far East and throughout the world and the return of prosperity was contained in the joint statement issued today by President Roosevelt and Viscount Ishii, of Japan.

The statement was issued at the conclusions of the conversation between the President and the Japanese representative and it noted the "unusual situation" in the Far East.

"We hope that the countries of the Far East," it said, "along with those of the Occident will be able to contribute substantially, in a spirit of co-operation, to the laying of solid foundations for a structure of world peace and prosperity."

The President and the Japanese envoy also announced an understanding for a return of stable monetary conditions and for an improvement in the price of silver.

As he drew near it he was accosted by two men, who shoved him into the car and got in with him. The did not display guns but forced him to hand over the money, then got out and hurried away.

He said one of the men had a large mole on one cheek. Both were about 35 years old.

SENATE FAVORS BAN ON ARMS

Washington, May 27 (AP)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today favorably reported the arms embargo resolution with an amendment by Senator Johnson (R. Cal.), to preserve American neutrality by applying any ban to all parties to a conflict.

The resolution, already adopted by the House, authorizes the President, in co-operation with other nations, if possible, arms shipments to any troubled area, including countries adjacent to nations actually over the brink of war.

Johnson's amendment added a proviso that "any prohibition of export or sale for export, proclaimed under this resolution shall apply impartially to all the parties to the dispute or conflict to which it refers."

he never dreamed himself capable and which often he cannot even comprehend.

He finds the burden of proof is upon him to demonstrate his honesty against the unsupported insinuations of the government agents.

If he is fortunate enough to emerge vindicated from this trial, there is no apology or redress offered him by the government. He is blithely told that the government has only done its duty in trying to get the utmost possible out of him, and is reminded that the law puts upon the taxpayer the burden of outplaying the government at its shady game of legalized shake-down and extortion.

* * *

THIS is nothing short of a racket and a most disgraceful one, as William Randolph Hearst pointed out on March 13, 1932, in directing all his newspapers to conduct a sustained crusade against the federal income tax. Mr. Hearst said:

"The income tax system has become the greatest racket in the United States and the government the biggest racketeer.

"The system is in itself unjust, inequitable and un-American. It paralyzes enterprise and penalizes honesty.

"When the Democratic party has the sincerity to be democratic, when it has the patriotism to be American, it will substitute excise taxation and sales taxation for undemocratic, un-American discriminatory income taxation with its crooked evasion and equally crooked enforcement."

The whole income tax system should be abolished. It is dishonest through and through. It robs the poor man and exempts the rich man. It lifts the burden of supporting the government from the shoulders of the strong and powerful and puts it on the backs of those least able to sustain it.

From the standpoint of public morals this is monstrous!

A government that tolerates such a condition or is insensible to such injustice has betrayed its trust. It is not worthy of the people's confidence nor will it long enjoy it.

* * *

THE obvious duty of Congress is to have done with the exploded fallacy that the government can be run on the dwindling returns of an iniquity like the income tax. Let the growing popular demand for sensible tax legislation be heeded by Congress.

The people understand that the government needs revenue. They want taxes that are not silly, but productive. The public opposition to the sales tax is fast disappearing. It was primarily due to a lack of popular understanding of its nature and operation.

The people now realize that such a tax is automatic, relatively painless, equitable, and even considerate of the individual purse because of its wide distribution.

They are willing to accept a tax that is shown to have worked well where it has been tried.

They are sick of the income tax, which has all the vices of the worst of taxes—and, in addition, is an UTTER FIASCO AS A PRODUCER OF NEEDED REVENUE.

THE BELL THAT FAILED GIVES THE CAPE ONE MORE HERO

SIGNAL BREAKS DOWN DURING HEAVY FOG

Lightkeeper Rings It by Hand for More Than 15 Hours

Provincetown, May 27—The story of the bell that failed was written today as a classic into the annals of the United States Lighthouse Service—its hero the keeper of the lonely Long Point Light 10 miles out at the very tip of Cape Cod, at the entrance to the harbor where a ship, called the Mayflower, first dropped anchor.

Through two nights of dense fog when the beacon of the light was lost in the black shroud, the reverberations of the great half-ton fog bell beat across the dunes, the harbor and the outside sea, warning shipping from the shoals.

Whang! (count 30 seconds). Whang! Whang! (count 30 seconds more). Whang!

THREE TIMES A MINUTE

Three times a minute for every minute of every hour the bell sounded through the impenetrable shroud and fishermen in little ships rounding the shoals were thankful.

"That old mechanism is a life-saver," they said. "The machinery has been in use since 1878, but it still swings that old 1000-pound clapper."

But it was no machinery swinging the clapper of the Long Point fog bell Wednesday and Thursday nights, it was revealed today. It was the good right arm of Thomas L. Chase, 35, the lightkeeper who lives out on the point with his wife.

MACHINERY GIVES WAY

The machinery failed at 10:45 Wednesday night soon after the thickest fog of the season set in. Chase tied a rope to the striker, and, with a watch in one hand, began striking the bell by hand at the regular intervals charted for mariners. "Swapping hands" occasionally he stayed on the job until 8 o'clock Thursday morning when the fog lifted. He made a quick trip 10 miles over the dunes to Provincetown, then drove to Boston, got spare parts for the machinery and returned that afternoon.

The fog set in again. From 8 o'clock Thursday night until 2 o'clock yesterday morning, when it again cleared, Chase swung the clapper by hand. Today the mechanism of the bell was repaired, and Chase went to bed for a little rest. But his shoulders ached so he couldn't sleep. He had swung a half-ton clapper by hand three times a minute for 15¼ hours—about 2745 times, never missing a beat.

RIDDELL JURY ASKS ADVICE

Following 8½ hours of deliberation the jury that has been trying John D. Daley, 20, of Newponset, on a first degree murder charge of killing Harry Riddell, 67-year-old Atlantic baker, came into Superior court shortly after 2 p. m. at Dedham today and asked for further instructions.

At 12:30 p. m. today Foreman Sheed Anderson, of Brookline, asked Deputy Sheriff Howard Capen to deliver a note to Judge John J. Burns, who is presiding. The note was accompanied by one of the photographs introduced in evidence by the state.

The jurors began deliberations again today at 9:10 a. m. after considering the evidence in the case for 3½ hours last night before retiring.

Before the jury retired, Assistant District Attorney Sullivan asked for a second degree murder verdict, which would make life imprisonment mandatory. After the jurors had left the courtroom to begin deliberations, John A. Bowen, 23, of Neponset, pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree, in the same case, and was sentenced to life imprisonment in State Prison.

John Swindler, 326 East Squantum st., Atlantic, explained he was taking Burt Holmes, a friend, to the office of Dr. Muir at 1195 Morton st., and that Holmes had a broken blood vessel. He said he shouted to Dauphine to clear a way through traffic for him.

BIRDSEYE VIEW OF THE CENTURY OF PROGRESS IN CHICAGO

A PEEP AT THE HUGE HARD TELESCOPE AT HARVARD, MASS.

Harvard University is ready to lend a hand in the opening of the Chicago World's Fair, tonight. Just before 8:30, the official time of opening, there will be a signal given over telegraphic wires and over radio station concerning the weather conditions in and about the Williams Bay (Wisconsin) Observatory and the Allegheny Observatory, in the Allegheny mountains in Western Pennsylvania. Should clouded conditions exist in both of these territories—then orders will be sent along to the Harvard Observatory, located at Harvard, Mass. At once there will go in action the taking of light from the famed star Arcturus—and mind you they have only picked that star for some sentimental reason. You will get from the above diagram—arranged by Charles Schmidt, artist—how the current in turn is shot along to Chicago—to open the doings of A Century of Progress, should Harvard be asked to do the job of transmitting Arcturus light. This photograph at the right was taken up on Oak Ridge, Harvard. You see Harvard scientists make the final adjustments of the apparatus that has been mounted onto the 24 inch telescope at the new Harvard observatory. Left to right these men are Mr. H. Hanson and Dr. William H. Calder, both of the Harvard staff. They are testing the delicate adjustments on the photo electric cell apparatus which is mounted in the square box on the top of the telescope. This photo electric cell will operate from the light from the star Arcturus and will send a small amount of power through an amplifier which will amplify the current to light the lights of the fair in Chicago. City of Wonders, Chicago Fair, Throws Open Gates

Chicago, May 27—The gates are open!

A century of progress exposition, itself the crowning glory of the hundred years it was built to commemorate, welcomes the world.

Erected by the courage of men who could not be daunted even by the most terrific economic disaster in the history of the world, it stands as a reminder of the fact that even that abysmal depression, when viewed as a part of a century was just a bad half hour.

COST IN MILLIONS

And so promptly at 8:30 o'clock today the curtain rose. Measured in dollars the show has cost, thus far, $37,072,011.

Postmaster General James A. Farley opened the exposition as special representative of President Roosevelt. Wit hhim were Governor Henry Horner of Illinois, Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago and Rufus C. Dawes, president of the exposition.

Farley conveyed President Roosevelt's regrets at being unable to attend the dedicatory ceremonies an dexplained that the press of national and international affairs kept him in Washington.

The idea of having a world's fair in Chicago in 1933 was first suggested to the late Mayor Dever on August 17, 1923, and a committee was named.

But the election of William Hale Thompson as mayor intervened and the committee resigned.

It appeared that the project was dead—but it wasn't, for in 1927 a new group, headed by Charles S. Peterson, revived it, and on December 3 of that year it was formally announced that the fair would be held.

Those were days of prosperity and the thing looked easy. Then came the world-wide economic shock which was heralded by the stock market collapse in the fall of 1929.

Then began the greatest struggle of all, the struggle against fear—fear in high places, fear speaking through men of supposed wisdom. Such men were saying "it cannot be done—it's folly—it's foredoomed —the whole thing must be abandoned."

The answer of the indomitable men who had taken on the job was given not in words but in action. And today that answer is complete. The prophets of gloom are silenced at last. They are dispersed.

Thousands of workmen applied final strokes of brush and hammer yesterday. Last night, under floods of light, the "clean-up" army worked, sweeping, mopping, scrubbing, polishing.

POLICE NOW IN SUMMER GARB

You can't get arrested by a blue-coat in Boston today, because there are no bluecoats. More than 2300 Boston patrolmen changed from blue to khaki and are all dressed for summer.

The uniforms are of khaki and include puttees. They are much lighter in weight than the blue, and give the officers a more military bearing.

Ordinarily, May 30 is the day police change from blue to khaki, but the warm weather resulted in the order being advanced.

More than $6,000,000 will be available to 20,000 depositors of the Bay State National Bank and the Merchants Trust of Lawrence under a merger of these two institutions authorized by state and federal bank authorities, Gov. Ely said in a statement today.

The Merchants Trust has been in the hands of conservators since the bank holiday in March. The new bank will be known as the Bay State National Bank.

Gov. Ely said the cooperation of stockholders of both institutions is necessary for success, and he calls on all citizens of Lawrence to support the new bank.

Mourners to Raise Steins in Tribute to Late Comrade

Steins of real beer will be reverently raised in Turn Verein hall, 39 Forest st., Malden, tomorrow afternoon during the funeral service for Martin Moeckel, 65, who died today at his home, 49 Warren ave., following five weeks illness, from hardening of arteries.

This old Bavarian custom, will be indulged in by the host of friends of the deceased, at his special request. The funeral service will be held in the hall he loved so well, also at his special request. He had been president of Malden Turnverein 25 years and was widely known by residents of the city.

The widow gave the society a large portrait of her husband today for suspension in the hall.

The body will lie in state in the hall from 12 noon to 2:30 tomorrow. The funeral services will be conducted by Rev. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of First Universalist Church, Malden, and will be followed by another by the Odd Fellows, of which Mr. Moeckel was a member. Mr. Moeckel is survived by a son and daughter, in addition to his wife.

3 CONCERNS ON CITY BLACKLIST

Mayor Curley announced today he had "blacklisted" four large Boston fruit and vegetable concerns "for what appears to be direct evidence of collusion in bidding for a city contract."

The contract was for supplying eatables to the City Hospital, Long Island Hospital, Boston Sanatorium and other municipal institutions for the month of June.

By rejecting their bids and buying in the open market the city saved $5,063, the mayor said. No more bids will be accepted from them.

"These four concerns bid and the lowest bid was $15,325," he said. "This appeared to me to be about 33 per cent. in excess of the bids for May.

"As a result, I instructed Supt. of Supplies Philip A. Chapman to reject the bids and go in the open market and purchase the same amount of fruits and vegetables. He did, and the cost was $11,462.

"It appears to me that these four concerns first scared off all other bidders but cutthroat competition did, having accomplished that, then raised their bids far above the open-market price."

Kidnapers Seize Hennessey's Brother--Just a Mistake!

An attempt last night to kidnap Michael J. ("Spike") Hennessey, Boston gangster and long reputed a thorn in the flesh of "big shot" racketeers, was a "dud."

Police of Roxbury Crossing division today were informed by his brother, Owen, of Ruggles st., Roxbury, that the kidnapers got "Spike's" brother, James, by mistake.

The plan evidently was to take "Spike" into the country and end his career, because they were well beyond the city limits when James convinced them of their mistake.

Months ago one of Hennessy's brothers was fired upon in an auto on Columbus ave, by gangsters who mistook him for "Spike."

The kidnaping of James Hennessey took place at Hampshire and Whittier sts., Roxbury, when gangsters dragged him and a friend from "Spike's" car.

When the mistake was discovered half an hour later, they let the two men go. According to Owen Hennessey, his brother did not know who the men were.

Police had learned of the "snatching" from a girl friend. They had combed the city for clues to the kidnapers until questioning of the brother revealed what had happened.

Last year "Spike" Hennessey told police he was "on the spot" and feared for his life. Later a man, evidently mistaken for him, was fired upon and wounded outside his former home on South Huntington ave., Jamaica Plain. Hennessey was arrested after the murder of Charles ("King") Solomon, racket chief, but released. He now lives on Cedar st.

On information that a gang of safe-breakers was getting ready to invade Boston, police were ordered to keep a strict watch on the business sections over the week-end and next week's holiday.

Supt. Michael H. Crowley urged that business houses make quick deposits in banks as a means of frustrating the safe-crackers.

GIRL KILLED IN LEAP FROM CAR; DRIVER HELD

Framingham Operator Is Arrested; Victim Feared Kidnaps

A Wellesley girl jumped from a swiftly moving auto to her death in Natick early today, apparently in fear that the driver, from whom she and a girl companion had "thumbed" a ride, meant to harm them.

Her companion also attempted to leap from the machine but was restrained by the operator, George Jones, 28, of Talbot st., Framingham, as he brought the car to a stop.

DIES IN HOSPITAL

The dead girl was Miss Louise Cassoli, 20, of Twitchel st., Wellesley. She sustained a fractured skull when she leaped from the auto to the pavement and died a short time later at Leonard Morse Hospital, Natick.

Her companion is Miss Mary Ferrara, 20, of Smith st., Wellesley.

Jones was arrested on a technical charge of manslaughter and for improper driving by Police Chief Thomas Evans. He pleaded not guilty in Natick district court and was held in $700 bail by Judge Kennedy for a hearing June 2.

His story to police, corroborated by Miss Ferrara, indicted the tragedy was the result of a misunderstanding.

"We were coming from Framingham and got a ride with this man, Jones," said Miss Ferrara. "We sat in the back seat and the only conversation was when Jones asked Louise for matches and she handed him a pack.

"When we reached Brown's Corner, Natick, another car passed us. The fellow in the other car waved and our driver waved back.

GIRLS SUSPICIOUS

"I whispered to Louise, 'I wonder whether that is a signal.' Then I said out loud, 'Are you trying to put us on the spot?' I thought there was something funny. Our car speeded up.

"The next thing I saw was Louise jumping from the car. I don't remember whether I tried to jump, too, I may have.

"Jones stopped the car and we went back to where Louise was lying, all bruised. It was terrible. She was lying at the side of the road and was unconscious and moaning.

"He got stood there and I had to stop several cars. They got out and asked what happened. Nobody did anything and I cried, 'Do something; take her to the hospital.'

"A man took her to the hospital in his machine and I went over to Jones and asked for his license and registration. He said, 'You'll get it,' and left.

ABSOLVES DRIVER

"I went to the hospital in another machine. They had to wait for a doctor, as only a nurse was there when we came in, he said Louise was dead. I don't think they should hold Jones."

The dead girl's father, who suffered a shock some time ago, was in a serious condition today. She is survived also by her mother and two brothers. She was employed as a secretary.

'PEG O' MY HEART' LAUDED BY FANS

Marion Davies Superb in Title Role of This Thoroughly Entertaining Picture

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Marion Davies gives rich charm and life to Loew's State screen this week. Her art and Cosmopolitan's production touch combine to make "Peg o' My Heart" distinctively rare entertainment. The title role demands vast histrionic skill; it is faceted like a diamond, its shades running from grave to gay, and in-between. The sparkling humor, often changing to pathos, the inner requirement of spontaneity, make essential a deep dramatic sense, plus a sense of jollity, the whole interwined with exquisite sentiment. The star has all these qualifications, applies them to her creation of Peg, and the result is perhaps the finest of all her many great screen characterizations. She is the chief reason why "Peg o' My Heart" is as sweet and as fresh as the first violet of spring.

* * *

The film, given a notable premiere at Loew's State yesterday, is so simple in its sure and deep appeal, so sincere in its theme and its acting, that it at once establishes its place as one of the finest of Hollywood pictures. It sweeps upon one like a breath from a garden of roses; which is tribute to the Cosmopolitan hand in producing the time-honored romantic comedy. As Peg Miss Davies once more shows why she is the Golden Girl of the screen. She intrigues, she pleases, she is that poet's thing of beauty that is a joy forever. There's a gala company of players about her, the story is good drama, and the production is a lavish one, as Cosmopolitan pictures are wont to be.

Marion Davies

This film is that rare bird in the movie flock, a "natural." Which means that it is innately a picture for all ages, possessing nothing seeming to be synthetic, but all giving the illusion of life itself. The charm that Miss Davies infuses into all her work, is imparted here to the entire photoplay, and the romance becomes as true as the realistic and pictorially beautiful background. Too many recent films have been artificial, and it is a distinct joy to hail one that swings along in its action as invitingly as a babbling brook. Here, too, the dialogue, so often a handicap rather than a help, sparkles in a rare fashion. And Miss Davies' brogue as the Irish lass is one of the year's surprises and delights.

* * *

Exquisite is the camera touch, as deft as the Davies artistry. For beginning, an outdoor sequence, a fishing village, the smacks on the shore, the folk on the cobbles. The panorama is amazingly lifelike. The barefoot Peg comes down to the boats, to help unload the catch. Hair done in pigtails at the sides, she is a fetching figure. You wonder how Miss Davies plays the lass so perfectly, and within an hour is just as perfectly the older Peg in more sophisticated London surroundings.

The story you may know; the poor girl learns she is heiress to a vast fortune in pounds sterling. But there are conditions; one is that she must move into the aristocratical estate in England. Here is a transition that requires all the skill of a great actress; Peg is soon plunged into the whirl of passion and greed of her new world. For even an enemy she must make sacrifice of herself. Through many episodes that are merry and some that are poignant, she must find the solution of the problem of happiness. In Ireland it had been simple; in Britain it is complex. There are tears, there are smiles, but the ending is the reward. Love finds its way.

* * *

By the able direction of Robert Z. Leonard, the Hartley Manners play has been given modern values; it is a story of today as much as it is a classic of yesterday as to plot. The cameras swing sharply and cleanly, always upon eloquent backgrounds and settings. Thus the lenses leap out of stage limitations and "Peg o' My Heart" is made into true motion picture that has abundant camera action.

There is a gorgeous musical score, with two songs that are likely to be hits. Interwoven are Irish dances, choruses, as in the old village, and later in the scene after the fox hunt. And the orchestral sections are magnificent.

Over and above all this unusual treatment rises the art of the star. She makes the colleen a real being; the very breaths she has is a thing to marvel at. She brings conviction, for she portrays a Peg that is sincere and captivating. The whims, the wistfulness, the boisterous good nature of the character are all finely turned.

In the cast are performers capable of meeting every need. J. Farrell MacDonald as the father Tyrrell Davis as the comical aristocrat, Onslow Stevens, the leading man, Juliette Compton, Alan Mowbray, Doris Lloyd and Robert Greig are all excellent. Even the Sealyham, "Michael," adds to the many joys in "Peg o' My Heart."

"Peg o' My Heart" is a delightful change to screen fare of the romantic comedy type. It is thoroughly entertaining.

Strong Cast in Mystery Film at Boston; Zeloya on Stage

A mystery thriller, expertly contrived with a number of thrilling situations, is the movie feature at the RKO Keith Boston. The film is "Tomorrow at Seven," enacted by a good cast headed by Chester Morris and Vivienne Osborne. It's just the kind of fare lovers of the murder stories like, often tense, with the suspense nicely maintained. On stage is a vaudeville bill of real excellence.

Jigsaw puzzles come into the skein of the movie plot. They are used by the killer to warn his victims; then comes the doom. One highlight is that the director depends almost entirely on his theme to carry through; the usual shadows, strange settings and so on, are for the most part missing. The scenarist uses an author of crime novels as a central figure. An anonymous fiend warns a wealthy merchant to expect his death the following night. With his secretary, his daughter, a crime novelist, two detectives and two pilots, Drake embarks on an air journey during the appointed hour to foil the killer. However, of the set time, the murderer strikes, killing Winters. After that the excitement is cumulative.

Chester Morris and Vivienne Osborne are a clever novelist and heroine respectively. Allen Jenkins and Frank McHugh, as the two detectives, bring in the comedy of the tale. Henry Stephenson, Grant Mitchell, Charles Middleton and Cornelius Keefe are other good players.

* * *

On stage the Boston has a fine bill. There is the topliner, Don Zelaya, good with the music and expert at patter-making. Plenty of Plenty of comedy comes with the appearance of Weston & Ellis; the Casting Campbells are among the most expert in their line, and other hit combinations are Purcell & Johns, and Gregory & Co. The Lee Gale revue is a spirited presentation, and Mr. Mayo and his Bostonians offer splendid musical numbers.

Janet Gaynor and Henry Garat in "Adorable" at the Met

By HARRIS MORGAN

An all-cream menu is the Metropolitan's offering this new film theater week. Screen fans may enjoy one of the sweetest of the year's picturs in "Adorable," wherein Janet Gaynor, wistfully attractive as ever, finds Henry Garat making ardent love to her in place of the once perennial Charlie Farrell. On stage, George Givot, familiar on stage and on the air, is featured; and the stage show is made hilarious by the presence of the slapstick Willie, West & McGinty team. Fabien Sevitzky brings up the triumpant harmony brigade for an all-round stellar show.

"Adorable" is a romance woven about a mythical kingdom. The alluring Janet is the princess, eager for exciting interludes in the palace humdrum. So she poses as a manicure lass, attends a ball, meets a soldier, and promptly is deeply smitten. It is Garat, no less, a dashing Frenchman whom some folk compare to Chevalier. We have seen him in foreign pictures and expect to find him developing into a worthwhile leading man at Hollywood. He does well enough in the Gaynor photoplay, and certainly shows he has ability as well as looks.

The narrative takes the usual turns of such tales; the princess, remaining incognito, will encourage the soldier, who, later, discovering her deception of him, professes to be very, very mad. But when she threatens to wed another, he quickly implants the soulful kiss that makes you know the kingdom will have a new ruler soon.

In the film Miss Gaynor sings several times. The film is superbly mounted, and is withal so wholesome, so clean, so sentimentally sweet, that is is sure to be a box office success. For the whole family can see it and enjoy it unashamed.

* * *

Mr. Givot is a big, handsome chap whose line is humor. He scores a decided hit. In the regular stage production, Quillie, West and McGinty are riotously funny; there are the fellows upon whose heads a building tumbles. It is one of the best slapstick acts in the business. Other stars are Gertie Green, Jay Mills, Rosemary & Davies, Byrne Sisters, Geraldine Costello and Lee, and Margie Green.

Mr. Sevitzky gets the usual ovation with the orchestra, and Mr. Martel is seen at the organ.

Sterling Stage and Screen Bill

"Hell Below," at Loew's Orpheum currently, is one of the best action pictures of the year. On stage Manager Victor presents another fine vaudeville program, topped by Frances White, always a charmer. The feature film has a sterling cast, including Walter Huston, Robert Montgomery, Jimmy Durante and Madge Evans.

The plot of the photoplay, based on Ellsberg's "Pigboats" and of special local importance in that one grand sequence is based on the sinking of the S-4 off Provincetown, deals with a conflict between love and duty faced by a young naval lieutenant in action in the Mediterranean during the World War. Montgomery is serving under the father of the girl he loves, but whose love is forbidden him. How, by disobeying orders, he loses his commission and subsequently redeems himself by a heroic sacrifice is depicted against a background of naval battles, fights with enemy aircraft and the whole great panorama of war at sea.

Miss White, the "Mississippi" miss, leads the stage show. Making excellent us eof her widely-known "kid" mannerisms, she offers a round of special songs delivered as only she can. She was enthusiastically received.

Mayris Chaney and Edward Fox fill the next important spot on the bill. They are ballroom dancers de luxe. Harry Burns, talking dialect comedian, provides most of the comedy on the bill with his large company in "Pardon Me." Other good acts are offered by Johnny Hyman, youthful monologuist, and Ade Duval and company in a series of magic feats.

Paul Muni Will Return to Screen

Warners Select Him for Lead in "America Kneels," the American "Cavalcade"

Los Angeles, May 27—We don't see Paul Muni often on the screen. That's because he is always wanted in New York for some stage play. Warner Brothers consider it a highly important piece of news that he will play the lead in their American "Cavalcade," "America Kneels."

The play by Sheridan Gibney and the adaptation by Edward Chodorov depicts the rise and fall of an American family through three generations. Carl Laemmle, Jr., did his best to get Muni for "Counsellor-at-Law," but after his success in "I Am a Fugitive" it couldn't be done. I hear, off the record, that Junior is trying to borrow John Barrymore for the role in "Counsellor-at-Law" that Muni created on the New York stage.

As interesting as any part he has ever played in a picture was Douglas Fairbanks' spectacular dash to meet the train carrying Mary Pickford East. Apparently Doug didn't take Mary's announcement that she was going to New York seriously, and when he came home and found the mistress of Pickfair had really gone he chartered a plane and flew to Albuquerque and to her amazement appeared on the train. Mary must have had a thrill over his eagerness to be with her and the rest of us had a thrill knowing that after 11 years of married life Douglas is still interested enough in Mary to put on such a stunt.

CONROY FIGHTS FOR NEW LAW CORBING SWEATSHOPS

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

The sweatshop label bill signed yesterday by Gov. Ely is the first step in a legislative sequence of progressive measures to make more effective the minimum wage law.

Given impetus by a public aroused to the low wage and unhealthy working conditions as revealed by the Boston Evening American's and Boston Sunday Advertiser's investigation in the 750 Massachusetts sweatshops, legislators throughout teh state have pledged their support to a mandatory law that will assure a living wage for girl and women workers.

Senator William S. Conroy, of Fall River, author of the sweatshop label bill, will now lend his efforts to securing legislation that will put "teeth" in the minimum wage law, following the disclosures by these two papers, that sweatshop operators were violating the law.

MAYOR BACKS PLAN

In Fall River, conditions are so serious that Mayor Joseph Hurley stimulated by the desire of the Industrial Improvement Association to better the industrial situation, has instituted plans for drastic reform and plans to call conferences at which heads of civic organizations will be present to form a plan for improvement.

The story of one Fall River girl worker and her experiences in underpaid shops is related here.

Rose's husband has been out of work for two years.

A month ago they were evicted from their tenement because they had no money to pay the rent.

By begging another landlord to whom her honesty and integrity is known, she, her husband and their baby son were permitted to enter another tenement flat and stay a few months.

Rose is 28. She is dark-haired and dark-eyed. Her face gives evidence that before she was forced into sweatshop factories, she was beautiful. But now darkness hovers about her saddened eyes.

WARNED BY DOCTORS

Factories and their unhealthy conditions have made Rose a sick girl, and today she must be careful for the doctors have warned her.

"It's such a struggle," she said pitifully. "I've always done good by everybody. I've always helped people if I could. But now it seems that nobody wants to do good for me.

"I know Fall River sweatshops. I've worked in so many of them. I've been a presser and I know the taste of those fumes. I know what it means to stand up on your feet all day long slaving for practically nothing. I had to get out of the factory. The doctors made me. But warning or no warning, I must go back."

Rose got a job at the Shelburne Shirt Company.

"No pressing," she told them. "No pressing. I couldn't stand it."

Not so long ago, she held that job in the same factory and she earned little more than $4 a week. And from Greater Boston come these pitiful recitals of underpaid workers:

CASE NO. 1

"When I was 14 I left school and started working. In the winter of 1927-28 I took a course in power machine operation at an industrial school. I go to evening high school now, but it's hard to keep awake after working all day.

"I used to work in a good shop, where they made nice dresses, but it closed last year. Since then I've worked in more places than I can remember—most of them pretty bad. I stayed a month in one place, where we got 25 cents a dress. They sold for $5.95 each, and the boss was very particular about our work.

"Then I worked for about four months in a place which made children's dresses which sold for $1.50 to $1.55, or 75 cents for the simpler styles. It was section work there, and we got 6 cents a dozen for putting in sleeves, 8 cents a dozen for hems, and from 3 to 5 cents a dozen for pockets. Small collars were 10 cents per dozen.

"One day I had some side seams to do on a new style dress. I asked the boss what the rate was, but he wouldn't tell me until he saw how fast I could do them. I made eight dozen in two and one-half hours, and then he said they were 3 cents a dozen, so I got a total of 24 cents for them. If a girl earned more than $10 a week, the boss cut the rates, and that was hard on the slower workers.

"I am a very fast operator, and I used to get from $8 to $11 a week there. Most of the women earned $5 or $4 weekly, and some only two.

CASE NO. 2

"I came to this country when I was 14 years old. I have four children. My husband is a painter. For two years he had no work, but since Christmas he has been working two days a week. I try to keep the house and my boys clean, but it is very hard with so little money. Our bed is tied up with rope. We cannot pay to have it mended. I worked two months last year making dresses like the one I have on. I get 90c to make a dozen.

"In a week I earn $2, sometimes $3. My husband say it is not worth it. I get tired. I cannot keep the house and my boys clean, and work, so I quit.

Another story on sweatshop conditions will be published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser tomorrow.

Death climaxed an evening of dancing for Louise Cassoli, 20, of Wellesley, as she leaped from auto in Natick when she feared a kidnap plot after thumbing a ride with girl companion. George Jones, 28, Framingham driver, is held on technical charge of manslaughter. (Staff Photo.)

VETS DECORATE GRAVES OF HEROES

The memory of America's war dead will be observed by veterans' organizations throughout Greater Boston and the Commonwealth, Sunday and Tuesday, Decoration Day.

Memorial services will be held in all Boston posts of the American Legion, G. A. R., Veterans of Foreign Wars, United Spanish War Veterans and other organizations on Sunday. Tuesday will be devoted mainly to the decoration of graves. Three posts of the American Legion are assigned to each cemetery and will parade on their way to and from the graves.

Many of the exercises will see an interchange of delegates from the different posts and veterans.

A feature of Sunday's observances will be a broadcast over WBZ and WBZA by the Rev. Chaplain Wallace Hayes of the V. F. W. from 1 to 1:30.

Mayor Curley will be the speaker on the Common on Tuesday morning at the exercises of the Kearsage Naval Association of Boston. He will attend a luncheon of the O'Connor Camp Spanish War Veterans, of South Boston. The Waltham post, American Legion, will dedicate its new home on Weston st. Tuesday at 4 p. m.

Bus service will be put on tomorrow and again on Memorial Day to and from the Mount Benedict and St. Joseph cemeteries in West Roxbury, the Boston Elevated announced. Additional service will also be put on for other cemeteries in the area served by the El.

JUROR'S STORY AIDS KEENAN

The disbarment trial of Wilfred B. Keenan, Boston attorney charged with jury fixing, was reopened before Judge Donahue in Supreme Court today at the request of George Alpert, Keenan's counsel, who wanted the court to hear testimony of two additional witnesses.

Alpert called Richard Kelley, an inmate of the Boston sanitarium, who testified that Patrick J. Shine, former juror, made charges of jury fixing against Keenan because he was treatened with jail unless he did.

Shine's testimony, taken by the investigating committee several weeks before he died in the sanitarium April 19, was the only evidence offered by a former juror which directly accused Keenan of bribing jurors.

"Shine told me," Kelley said, "that five members of the investigating committe called to see him in February, and told him he would go to jail unless he admitted that certain charges of jury bribing against Keenan were true."

Dr. William Fowler, connected with the sanitarium, testified that on the days Shine was questioned by the investigating committee, he had been given a cough medicine containing a drug to make him sleep.

NAZIS LOSE IN CHURCH FIGHT

Berlin, May 27 (AP)—The heads of 29 Landes-Kirchen (Protestant Church groups) today ratified the nomination of the Rev. Friedrich Von Bodelschwingh as bishop of the Church in defiance of a threat of "most dire consequences" by Nazi German christians.

Dr. Von Bodelschwingh as a result of this action is regarded by Protestants of all shades of creed as the Reich's first bishop.

Although belonging to the Lutheran church he was endorsed also by the Reformed churches and the United churches, as well as the smaller Protestant bodies.

The Nazis have stubbornly fought for the selection of the Rev. Ludwig Mueller. The German Christians insisted that the bishop must be a Nazi.

A committee made public the main lines of a plan for amalgamation of all the Landeskirchen in one Reich's church. At the head of this church will stand the Lutheran bishop but co-operating with him will be a spiritual ministry or cabinet representing non-Lutheran evangelical bodies. Each member of this cabinet will conduct the affairs of his particular faith.

'OUTLAW GOLD' BILL PUSHED

Washington, May 27 (AP)—The House and Senate Banking Committees today approved the administration bill to outlaw the "gold clause" of contracts and to make all contracts—both private and public—payable in legal tender money. The vote was 12 to 4.

Chairman Steagall said after the meeting he would seek a rule of procedure to bring up the measure in the House Monday.

Before reporting the measure, the House committee defeated 11 to 5 an amendment by Luce (R-Mass.) to prevent the cancellation of existing governmental gold contracts.

Jewish Problem in Silesia Is Held Up

Geneva, May 27 (AP)—Complications arose today in regard to settlement of the problem of Germany's treatment of German Jews in German Upper Silesia. Sean Lester of the Irish Free State, president of the League of Nations council, told the council he was unable to submit a report because of difficulties, and the question was postponed until Monday.

Divorce for Niece of Seabury Urged

Bridgeport, May 27 (AP)—Referee Nickerson recommended today that Eleanor Bill Harlow, of Darien, niece of Judge Samuel Seabury, of New York, be granted a divorce from James Harlow, New York broker.

The recommendation was made in Superior Court after Mrs. Harlow charged her husband with "habitual intemperance."

Action Is Sought on Closed Bank

Depositors of the closed Waltham Trust Co. have called a mass meeting for next Thursday night to demand that certain information on the condition of the bank be given them by officials. The group is headed by Edwin Blake, Waltham business man.

BOGUS MONEY IS FOUND IN BOOT

Secret Service agents went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Winn, Western ave., Cambridge, today and found a rubber boot containing $90 in counterfeit bills hidden in the cellar, it was reported at Federal building.

Mr. and Mrs. Winn were arrested in a car in which Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Green of Broadway, Cambridge, were also occupants. The latter were returning to spend their honeymoon in Cambridge. They were married in Nashua, N. H., yesterday.

According to the agents, a bundle of counterfeit $1 bills was found hidden in a box of pansies in the car.

"Mesmerism and Hypnotism" Subject

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypotism, Denounced" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow.

The Golden Text is "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Romans 8:31).

What the World Thinks of Gold

(By The Associated Press.)

American action to remove the gold clause from all obligations had these results abroad:

LONDON—The dollar lost ground in heavy selling; stocks were buoyant; Britain was relieved that the June war debt payment will not be so heavy a burden; expectations were that the payment would be made.

PARIS—A bear market in dollars developed, and the dollar fell in value; French coldness toward making war debt payments was not affected.

BERLIN—Germany wondered if she could afford to continue on gold; benefits to Germany from the new American policy were seen in the repayment of loans with inflated cheap dollars.

ROME—Bankers said paper dollars instead of gold would be used to pay $2,000,000 interest on the Morgan $160,000,000 loan due Thursday.

BRUSSELS—The Brussels market followed the reaction of the Paris money market.

Industrialists Eager to Turn Reins Over to Roosevelt

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD
Famous Author and Diplomat and Former Ambassador to Italy

Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.

Washington, May 27—Washington is alive with the influx of industrialists who have sensed the tremendous meanings of the new industrial legislation for emergency reorganization of business.

Out across the wide United States are those sleeping manufacturers and business men who utterly fail to hear the largest trumpet ever blown into the ear of American industry.

TRADITION PASSED OVER

The country has no realization whatever as to what is going on the menu this next week in Congress. The passage of bills has proceeded for 99 days, so rapidly that bills are passed almost before they are written—and only yesterday, the Senate and House conferees sent up a piece of legislation so rushed onto the griddle that it actually had in it "three-fourths of the board of six must approve"—i. e., four and one-half men! This machine-gun legislation has big gun fire lost in the rat-tat-tat.

The biggest shot of the session, in the sense that it may, in the end, knock our whole American industrial system into a cocked hat and set up another system, is the industry bill.

It is going into operation for two years, or until the President cries "enough!"

It puts aside every peace-time tradition—it raises Constitutional questions, which the Supreme Court can some catch only after a long stern chase.

It is strangely like Mussolini's successful organization of industry under Fascism, with voluntary partnership between management of capital and management of labor, and government the ultimate czar of both.

Without mincing words, the industry will turn the right to manage industry over to government control, hide, hair and hoof. There is no particular ground for approval of it, except that most pressing argument—that it is an emergency necessity; there is no particular condemnation of it, except that it is as unconstitutional as an act declaring that all private property belongs to the Secretary of the Treasury.

ROOSEVELT IN CHARGE

By all means, the most important aspect of the situation is that few people of the country—not even the industrialists who run around like beheaded chickens, or others who are completely asleep back on their home roosts—seem to understand clearly what the industry bill is ready to do, and without a question, will do.

It would give the President a chance to run, start, stop, steer, turn, direct the whole American industrial system, the products of which enter into interstate commerce—and all the separate businesses, factories and enterprises of that system.

First, you get a federal license to run. If you run well, and if you and your associates have drawn a code and agreements as to fair competition with the anti-trust law, temporarily removed by the government itself, and if your industry can maintain peace between employers and employed, and on top of that, if you please the President or his appointed agents, or "key-men" with what you have done, then he or they will give you a license and if you behave, he will not take your license away.

MUST PLAY BALL

You have been good and so you may be happy. Otherwise, when you break the rules, you can close your shop and perhaps pay $500 and maybe go to jail for six months.

"Go and organize your industry yourselves," the President and his directors and "key men" may say. "If you do it well, blessing upon you and here's your license. But if you mess it up, or quarrel with labor, or do not swallow the minimum wages, or hours of labor, we tell you to put into effect, your appeal is to heaven only. And if you have any trouble with your individual members just speak to us and they will have to play ball, or see what they will see!"

But those industrial group geniuses who are now scurrying in the heat around Washington, either not knowing what to do, or trying primarily to get their friends into key positions should realize:

PICKS OWN LEADERS

First—that quality of representation and not quantity of their prima-donna members will effectively make codes and contacts for that self regulation of American industry that the President would like to see.

Second—That if the President's appointment of Engineer Morgan of Antioch College, as head of the Muscle Shoals project, is indicative of his being aware that executive power calls for executive and stainless responsibility, he will want to pick his own "key men" for this unparalleled exercise of power.

CHESTNUT HILL HORSE SHOW, so long established that grandchildren and children of some of the early sponsors are now playing a leading role in the event, will attract Greater Boston horse lovers on Decoration Day for its 30th birthday program on the attractive and spacious Longwood Cricket Club grounds.

MRS. ROBERT B. ALMY

The program of 29 events, as drawn up on the timetable, will begin at 9:30 a. m. and will continue until about 6 p. m., with an intermission at noon, featured by a buffet luncheon at the Longwood Cricket Club.

The Saltonstall family, represented by two of the principal trophies for the show, the Richard M. Saltonstall cup for horsemanship and the Nora Saltonstall cup for qualified hunters, will take an active part in the show. Leverett Saltonstall and his two children, Emily and Peter, will ride, while Richard Saltonstall and his daughter, Polly, will be seen on their favorite mounts.

Mr. and Mrs. George Saltonstall West will compete as usual in the family class, in which they always make a fine showing with their sons and daughter.

The trophy for first place in the family class is the Andrew Adie Cup, and it is therefore quite fitting that the donor's daughter, Mrs. Robert B. Almy, Dedham Hunt's new M. F. H. should be judging. She will officiate with Richard Ely Danielson, Groton, M. F. H., and Frederick Ayer, of Myopia. Mrs. Almy was Rosamond Adie.

Other trophies in memory of former sponsors of the show are the Francis W. Lee cups for children's saddle ponies, and the Montgomery Rollins cup for saddle horses. There will be about 250 entries in the select field for this big holiday treat for horse lovers.

Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d, Louis Atherton of Swampscott, and Edward L. Bigelow, are additional parking space holders. Miss Marian Atherton is riding Dale McDonald which she recently acquired from Miss Miriam Winslow, who was the outstanding winner at Chestnut Hill last year. (Bring a box lunch and stay all day . . . ed.)

For those who enjoy the out-of-doors, there is a fine nine-hole golf course which is rated among the best in this locality and which can be enjoyed all day, which should prove a great attraction to the men of Greater Boston who are interested in the Guild.

In the afternoon there will be a May Pole dance for the children and at 4 o'clock there will be a tea dansant which will bring to a close a happy day for all Guild members and their friends. Mrs. Norbert J. Reilly, president of the Guild, is co-chairman with Mrs. Donnelly.

New Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

SUCH A BEVY OF BEAUTY as we have seen of late. All the gay little ladies are looking exceptionally trie this spring. Miss Anne Stevens with her curly brown hair and laughing blue eyes is wearing a crimson silk hat with matching frock that has dainty ecru touches.

Miss Lydia Fuller, always the essence of smartness, sporting a dark blue skirt and white pique blouse, one of those new tricky affairs with a natty hat to match, was seen lunching at the Ritz.

Margorie Evart, also frequenting the Ritz, is especially piquant and smart in a dark brown print with one of those alluring little pancake hats tilted over one eye and boasting a dashing white feather.

Jean Fuller, who is to make her debut next season, is wearing a gorgeous buff creation with a cape edged in ecru fox fur and a coy brown hat with a flirtatious veil, fascinating on her. Her hair is dark and curly and she has such sparkling and pretty eyes.

Miss Elizabeth Locke lunched at the Ritz the other day in a wide brimmed picture hat trimmed with black velvet.

Miss Jane O'Brien, who has been visiting Miss Rose Stearns of Buckminster rd., appeared in in robin's egg blue silk outfit. The last word in chic and good looks with a black straw hat brightened by dainty white flowers. Miss Stearns looked enchanting Monday night with her brown hair parted becomingly in the middle, and a violet blue spring print that exactly matches her charming eyes.

Miss Alice Farnsworth of the enchanting smile, blonde hair and blue eyes is wearing a flowered summer print that is lovely on her slender figure.

BOOKS---A Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

If you happen to be looking for a charming gift book, send for "Kings and Queens," with clever rhymes, by Eleanor and Herbert Farjeon, and 38 colored plates by Rosalind Thornycroft. This little volume was first published in England, and went into several large editions at once; it should have an equally great success in this country, brought out now by the House of Dutton.

From William I to George V various monarchs are celebrated in verse that frolics along delightfully, as if each measure was a dance step. Listen to this, for instance, on Queen Victoria:

Victoria, Victoria,
Was England's pride and joy
When grandma was a baby
And grandpa was a boy.
And they can still remember
the happy days long fled,
When the penny stamp was purple
And the ha'penny stamp was red.

Then Salisbury and Gladsone
Were powers in the land,
And Dickens was an idol,
And the Albert Hall was grand;
And hotcuses resorted
To Gunter's for a spread,
When the penny stamp was purple
And the ha'penny stamp was red.

Now the penny stamp is scarlet
And the ha'penny stamp is green—
How different from the days when Queen
Victoria was queen;
The far-off days when grandpapa
And grandmamma were wed,
And the penny stamp was purple
And the ha'penny stamp was red!

* * *

These are the kind of rhymes children will like to commit to memory, and in the process they will learn something of history. Take "William and Mary" as a sample:

"William and Mary
They sat on one throne;
You can't think of one
Of the couple alone.
How seldom we've heard
Of William the Third!
How rarely we've reckoned
With Mary the Second!
But William and Mary
Are known to the many
Like two indivisible
Sides of a penny,
And stick in the histories
One by the other,
As close as a Siamese
Twin to his brother!"

* * *

I AM well aware that quotation is the thief of royalties; and yet I cannot forbear one further sample on King Charles I:

"King Charles was such a gentleman
He wore his finest suits,
With scented gloves upon his hands
And lace upon his boots,
His hat it had the widest brim
And very longest feather,
And in a golden barge he sailed
The Thames in sunny weather.

King Charles was such a gentleman
He couldn't rule the land,
For all the lace upon his boot
And perfume on his hand.
Alas, alas, his wide-brimmed hat!
Alas, his sweeping feather!
King Charles he lost both hat and head
One winter day together.

* * *

In "Preface to Poetry" (Century Co.) Theodore Maynard approaches his subject with reverence; but he has the common sense to see that if one is to win readers to great poetry, one must not be too academic, stiff and dull. He is like a kindly professor who does not take too much for granted, and his chats between the poems which he gives from all the greatest poets make delightful reading. In speaking of Emily Dickinson and her addiction to false rhyming, he says.

"Several modern poets, among whom might be menitoned Elinor Wylie, have done this same sort of thing. It is permissible (and sometimes desirable) when not overdone. I am glad, for instance, that Humbert Wolfe rhymed jasper with vesper and not with clasp her, and that not merely because of the image involved."

* * *

Sidney Howard's fine play, "Alien Corn," which Katharine Cornell has been given with such success in New York, has been issued in book form by Scribner's and one finds that it reads as well as it plays. That long speech in the second act is particularly impressive on the printed page; and how beautifully Miss Cornell read it in the theater!

Clothes Made for Watchers

SPECTATOR SPORTS clothes change with the seasons. When the weather is divinely warm and the air is peppy, you may plan to "spectate" and not stick to that plan. You'll find yourself making a fourth for golf, or batting balls around the court to see if the old cunning has gone from your backhand stroke during the winter.

If you adore sports, and you probably won't give the time to watching them unless you do, it's safest to wear almost-sports clothes for watching them. Then if you're urged to play, and in the mood, you can accept. Even if you aren't and don't, you'll be much more comfortable in a rangy skirt, so you can keep up with any long-legged striding about that goes on. They're better for driving a car, anyway.

The particular plot of the clothes shown in the accompanying sketch is that they incorporate stripes and dots with marked success. The one one the left boasts a scarf arrangement, striped, which can be worn either tied around the neck or pulled down and knotted around the waist, making a gay bodice. You see it both ways, once with and once without the jacket. This is made of a dull surfaced white crepe, with a semi-crinkled surface.

At the right is another white crepe, this one a dress with a blue and white polka dot scarf and sailor. Wear polka dot gloves or not as you like—and as your courage dictates. They're smart, they're new, and it takes great dash to get away with them.

But the important things are the free and easy cut, the swing and general appropriateness of both these costumes. They're the sort of thing you'll feel comfortable in, whatever turns up.

SIMPLE FROCKS TAKE SIMPLE ADORNMENT---BROOCHES, CLIPS, BRACELETS

Miriam Haskell Designs Jewelry in Keeping With Youthful Summer Fashions

By Margaret Matson

A HARMONY of the SPIRIT of a dress with its adornments is a very necessary part of good dressing. If a frock has a feeling of youthfulness, of simplicity, and of casualness such as is true of so many of the smartest clothes today, then accessories should carry out that same spirit. We shouldn't put long court earrings, for instance, with one of the sunny little mousseline de soie evening frocks with their puffed sleeves and child-like sashes. We shouldn't put bold, modernistic jewelry with delicately befrilled frocks. And, the reverse, we shouldn't put fragile heirlooms with a costume that is too bold and modernistic itself to set the pieces off to best advantage.

We do find, on many of the newer summer frocks, many combinations of formal jewels with most informal fabrics. I don't want you to think that that is not smart. Quite the reverse. But these are done with an obvious breaking of the rules which is quite refreshing—rhinestones studded on organdy, and emeralds on pique, as we saw in two dresses this morning.

These are designed with a skillful hand that knows just how—and how much—to startle without sacrificing good taste. And the result is most effective.

Large Diamond

Too, it is quite proper to put a large diamond brooch or a pair of clips fashioned of diamonds and precious stones on a plain pique or crepe evening gown which otherwise would be too simple.

But here again, you will find a similarity of spirit in the long run for both the large pieces of jewelry and the almost-buttery simple gowns belong to the ultra-smart cosmopolitan woman. In practically everything that she does there is that same strange mixture of glamour and indifference that you feel in such a costume.

But for you or me to attempt too many of these daring combinations is too dangerous. Frequently what looks "interesting" on her looks like a mistake on us.

Miriam Haskell, one of America's own designers, has created a group of costume jewelry pieces which have caught the spirit of the cotton mode quite ingeniously. They hark back to nothing that has been done before. They utilize no precious or semi-precious stones.

Their merit is entirely in their color and the way that it plays into the vogue of today, and in their design with is simple without being severe and elaborate with being overdone. By varying the sizes of her beads and "berries" and by making some of opaque compositions and some transparent, she has succeeded in varying the formality and the degree of delicacy of the various pieces.

Silk Braid

Her bracelets are of silk braid that looks like very-like burlap beads. She has necklaces very similar. And her brooches and clips give somewhat the appearance of a small cluster of fruits. Her colors are the costume colors and so they match or harmonize quite perfectly. This is one type of jewelry which is right with summer frocks.

A single strand of real or artificial pearls is another excellent choice. Many women are wearing them with everything, even their bathing togs. And sometimes when the neckline is high, they are tucked inside and only glimpsed now and then.

The Marry-Go-Round; When Angels Rush

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE HEAVIEST burden a man can carry through life is a light-headed woman.

* * *

When a man confesses to an attractive girl that he loves his wife, it is hard to tell by his manner whether he is boasting, apologizing or just challenging her to make him change his mind.

* * *

The kind of love that flies out of the window when depression comes in at the door is so small that it might just as well have slipped out through the transom.

Helen Rowland

* * *

It used to be mint and cloves, but nowadays the difference between a Southern man's kiss and a Northern man's kiss is merely the difference between the aroma of corn and the aroma of juniper.

* * *

Oh, yes, love is blind! So long as a man is in love with a woman, she fills his whole horizon, so that he can't SEE another woman. The moment he ceases to love her, the world seems full of more alluring girls than he had ever suspected.

* * *

The average man appears to be going through life defying any girl to make him register an emotion that will affect his blood pressure.

* * *

Before prohibition women were so unsophisticated that no girl knew how many drinks she could hold, much less why a brass rail was essential to the flavor of beer.

* * *

To a man "love" is any emotion he happens to feel for a woman. He can always imagine that he's in love with any woman who happens to be around—until another woman comes around.

This is the heady season, when many an "angel" rushes into a love-trap where even a fool might know enough not to tread.

Guard Against Hay Fever Season

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

AT THIS time of the year I receive many letters requesting information about hay fever. We are approaching the hay fever season. The victims of this ailment know that unless they quickly take the necessary precautions they are doomed to weeks of intolerable suffering.

Dr. Copeland

Hay fever is a disease characterized by a sensitivity to certain pollens. The pollens may come from trees, grasses or rag-weed. When exposed to these pollens the victim complains of itching and congestion of the eyes. There is a thin and irritating discharge from the nose. The inside of the mouth itches and there are violent attacks of sneezing.

The symptoms are aggravated by repeated exposure to the offending pollen or plant. As a rule, the suffering is more marked in the morning and relieved as evening approaches. The sensitivity persists as long as the offending substance is within reach of the patient.

"Perennial hay fever" is a form of hay fever present throughout the year. The sufferer from this form of hay fever is sensitive to animal danders, vegetable powders, house dust, foods or drugs. The symptoms are identical with those caused by a pollen or plant.

Do not confuse hay fever with asthma. The asthmatic sufferer has difficulty in breathing and complains that he cannot catch his breath. The hay fever patient can breathe, but it causes him great discomfort. Of course a victim of hay fever may also be a sufferer from asthma, both diseases existing at the same time.

It is only within recent years that a hopeful remedy for hay fever has been discovered. The treatment is not successful in all cases. It consists of the injection of vaccines made from a solution of the ragweed pollen or other pollen to which the victim is sensitive.

The injections must be given over a long period of time and preferably before the hay fever season begins. By means of "sensitivity tests" it is possible to determine the plant, pollen or substance to which the sufferer is sensitive. When this is discovered, the vaccine is made and then injected.

Health Queries

E. B. Q.—Would nervousness be apt to cause the heart to beat very fast, beating in my ears when I lie down so that I cannot sleep? This condition has persisted for some time—I am naturally nervous.

A.—While nervousness would be apt to cause such trouble it would be well to have the heart examined to make sure that it is perfectly normal. In the meantime avoid undue strain, fatigue and exertion. Rest and relax as much as possible.

A Reader. Q.—Can poor vision be corrected any other way besides wearing glasses?

CHIC CHECKED GINGHAM

Cottons are destined to an important place on the beach this summer. Especially the little beach ensembles of bathing suits and wrap-around beach skirts such as the one shown on Miss Suzanne Morris. It is of plaid gingham in red, yellow and blue, and is lined with jersey just in case she is tempted to go into the water. The skirt that goes with the suit Miss Morris has flung over her shoulder. It ties in three knots at the side and may be worn as a cape if one likes. Her sandals are of cotton also, and she wears a number of silver bracelets which are an amusing accessory for new beach costumes.

THE DAILY TRUE STORY

A Matter of Time

THREE MEN got out of an automobile in front of the Farmers' Trust Company of Bentonville and entered the bank. As they came through the door they all drew revolvers and the leader said:

"Stay right where you are and put up your hands. Don't move and you won't be hurt. Try any funny stuff and——"

No one moved.

Five minutes later the three backed out of the bank, one carrying two heavy sacks of money. They jumped into the automobile and sped off. When attempts were made to head them off by telephone calls it was found that the wires leading in and out of the little town had been cut. The pursuit was half an hour late in starting.

When, some three months later, three men went on trial in the Bentonville court for holding up the Farmers Trust Company and robbing it of $16,000, Jerry Hammond, the young county attorney, felt fairly certain of a conviction. The three had been arrested in a nearby city after witnesses of the holdup had identified their rogues' gallery pictures. All had police records.

AN UNBROKEN ALIBI

They also had expensive, experienced, none-too-scrupulous lawyers. When these latter had finished with their cross-examination of the state's flustered, bewildered witnesses, Jerry Hammond was sorry of a conviction.

When the defense put on its case he despaired of a conviction. Six witnesses swore to an alibi. They swore that the three defendants, at the time the bank had been robbed, were 40 miles away drinking in a roadhouse. The witnesses were sure of the time, positive and certain about it. They swore that the three had come into the roadhouse at 3 o'clock, the same hour at which the bank, 40 miles away, was being robbed.

Court recessed before the closing arguments. Jerry went back to his office convinced that the men were guilty, but that the jury would never find them so. The identical alibi had been weak and a bit uncertain. The alibi was strong and unbroken.

As he leaned back in his chair he looked through the window and saw the leaves being whirled about the courthouse square by the cold winds of fast-coming winter. The thought came to him that his case—the State's case—was being blown about in the same manner by the unbreakable alibi.

Someone said, "Listen, Jerry."

STATE'S WITNESS

He turned to face his secretary, Irene Connors, who was his secretary only in the office. Outside the office she was the girl who was soon to become Mrs. Jerry Hammond.

"What is it, dear?" he asked. Then the look on her face caused him to sit up straighter.

"Listen," said Irene again. "I just thought of something—something that even those lawyers didn't think about."

Jerry listened.

When court reconvened Jerry addressed the judge, explaining that he would like to call one witness in rebuttal. The witness proved to be the station agent.

"What's this all about?" demanded one of the defense attorneys.

"I'm calling Mr. Tompkins as an expert witness," said Jerry. He paused a moment and then he added, "An expert on time."

The station agent's testimony was brief and to the point. He soon qualified as an expert as a man who got his exact time every hour over the telegraph wires. Cross examination was useless. The defense didn't even attempt it. They knew they were licked. They knew they were licked even before Jerry drove home the point in his closing address to the jury.

FORGOT ONE THING

"These defendants are city men," said Jerry. "If they hadn't been they wouldn't have made the mistake they did. Remember, this holdup was committed three months ago, in August. They probably arranged this alibi a week ago. But both they, and the witnesses forgot one thing. What that thing is Mr. Tompkins has told you.

"The alibi witnesses swear that the men were in a road-house near the city at three o'clock and thus they couldn't have been holding up the bank at three o'clock. But they are convicted by their own witnesses. Because the three o'clock was city time—daylight saving time. We don't have daylight saving time in Bentonville. Three o'clock in the day was only two o'clock here. They robbed the bank at two o'clock our time and then when they fixed the alibi they fixed it by their own time—forgetting that last August daylight saving time was in effect."

The jury didn't forget it. (All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Does Not 'Pet,' So Boy Gets Peeved

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two weeks ago I met him at a party. He asked me to dance a few times, and I found myself sitting with him alone on the porch. He asked me if I was the petting kind. I told him no, I didn't like it. Last week I met him at a dance. Every time we saw one another he smiled, but that was all. He never asked me to dance. I meet all types of boys, but still I can't help getting a thrill every time I think of him. CLAIRE.

Dear Claire, I think you gave the young man the right answer for the question he asked. But, my dear, don't take it too much to heart that you were not asked to dance the second time. Quite possibly the young man had certain obligations at this party and was unable to ask you for a dance.

Won't Give Him Any Encouragement

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am as much in love with a girl as it is possible to be, but she won't give me any encouragement. In fact, she is sarcastic and real nasty to me before people, just to show her power. She says I'm too young, but I don't think nineteen is too young to be in love, do you? There's another girl who is in love with me, but I don't return it in her case. What's the best means of breaking a date with a girl you don't like, and not hurt her feelings?

GEORGE.

Dear George: Answering your first question, No, I don't think that nineteen is too young to fall in love; but if the girl only wants to show her power over you, I'd try to get over it. You can always plead a business engagement for breaking a date, but don't fail to do it in time for the young lady to make another engagement.

She Left Him Because of Temper

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to have your advice on a matter which has been worrying me considerably. I have been going with a certain girl for two years. I know she loves me, or did love me at one time, and I care very deeply for her. The reason she has quit me, she says, is on account of my bad temper. Don't you think she could have found that out two years ago? And do you think that is the reason she broke with me?

JOE.

Dear Joe: Don't you think that the hasty temper may have increased during those two years, without your realizing it? That's the way with tempers; they do tend to amplify, and the last one to realize it is the possessor thereof. Here's good luck to you, next time you see this girl.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Don't Be Abrupt

IF YOU don't hear what a person says, ask courteously, for a repetition, by saying, "I beg your pardon," or "I beg your pardon—what did you say?", or "I'm sorry, but I didn't quite hear what you said."

Don't use the abrupt "What?"

White for Mourning

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me if it is correct to wear white for mourning in the summer time? C.

Yes, all white is as deep mourning as all-black, and it is very refreshing to see all-white worn in the summer by people in mourning. Many people in mourning also make it a point to wear all-white in the house in any season.

PREMIERE

By Robert Terry Shannon

"YOU FOOL," she said poisonously to Cavanaugh. "What makes you think you can get away with this? I ought to kill you. I ought to take a gun and explode it a dozen times right in your face!"

Cavanaugh's voice was steel.

"It would do you good to look at yourself in the mirror."

"So my face doesn't please you any more!" she threw at him. "Now—I don't like a movie star. You don't like my kind of beauty!"

She began to laugh with a derisive clattering in her throat.

"You gave me a marvelous idea! I wonder if you would find this Leni Lazenka so heavenly to look at—if somebody threw a bottle of vitriol in her face."

Cavanaugh sprang to his feet. His face, suddenly, was pale as death.

"You don't realize what you're saying!" he cried hoarsely.

Her eyes lit with a quick fiendish delight.

"You believe I'd do it! You begin to realize, eh? You can bet your last dollar I'd do it! What they will do to me afterwards doesn't matter. You think I'm a fiend! Well, perhaps I am!"

In the whole of his experience Cavanaugh had never encountered anything like this. It was grotesque, abnormal—a revelation out of bedlam. The whole room was filled with her quivering waves of hate. His brain began to go DIZZY . . .

HE FIRED

She lifted her arms and came toward him. "My darling . . ." she was saying in another voice. "I was jealous . . . you . . ."

Cavanaugh backed away from her.

"Keep away from me!"

He humped against a chair. She was closer, so close that her perfume was sweet and sickly in his nostrils. She filled the room. There was no escape. She was a power of infinite evil engulfing everything else . . .

"Keep away from me!" his words rang with desperation.

What happened was not clear in his mind because it was not a process of intellect. Her arms got around him and he flung off their coiled strength. He was not struggling against a woman but against an unknown kind of danger that could not be cobatted by any means at hand. It was instruction that tore at the soul and left the body untouched.

He looked at her face and by some distortion of vision it seemed black as the night itself. . . .

Again there was some sort of struggle in which his hands and arms moved with heavy slowness as muscles move in the resisting thickness under water.

At the same moment on the fire escape across the court Poletzki raised his right arm and aimed the automatic directly at Cavanaugh's head. For one stretching second he aim was perfect. His finger began to compress the trigger as the man and woman before his eyes started again their struggle motion.

It was too late to stop the shot. In the red-colored instant as the weapon roared in his wet hand Poletzki knew what had happened.

For a fragment of eternity Cavanaugh stood stark still with the noise reverberating in his ears. He was looking with an expression of astonishment at Poletzki.

He saw her face dimly as in a fog.

The eyes widened. Her lips moved but uttered no words. Very slowly her knees gave way and she sank gradually into a heap upon the floor.

Then slowly she fell face forward.

Cavanaugh's first action was one of surprise, then relief. He did not know exactly in that instant what had happened. He was aware only that the woman had ceased torturing him. He stood still looking down at her, wondering if she had fainted—and knowing, simultaneously, that she had been engaged. How usually he knew that a shot had been fired.

His first thought was that she had committed suicide.

"Now—what does that get you?" he said aloud.

Annette made no response. Cavanaugh bent over her, put a hand on her shoulder and withdrew it quickly.

Through the open window a wisp of air drifted in smelling of burnt powder. He went to the divan and got a pillow. Kneeling, he turned Annette over and placed it under her head. Her dress was cut low in front and across the skin ran a narrow crickle like a strand of bright red ribbon. .

"Annette—wake up!" he said persuasively. "Open your eyes! I'm going to call a doctor for you——"

Her eyes, steadily upon her cold and fixed face, told him she was not breathing.

He got up to his feet and wiped his hands with a handkerchief. Somehow there had been a little blood on his fingers. He looked around on the floor for a revolver, but no such weapon was present.

Other people in other apartments, startled by the pistol shot, were rolling out of their beds, turning on lights, throwing up windows.

"What's happened?" someone was calling across the court.

"There was a shot right under my window—"

"I'm going to phone the police!"

"There was a man on the fire escape! He climbed down and ran around the corner of the building."

Cavanaugh closed his window against this clamor and drew the curtain over it. It did not matter what those people were shouting.

ANNETTE DEAD

Some one—not himself—had shot and killed Annette. Who it was or why or how was beyond his immediate comprehension. It had all happened so swiftly that he was dazed and confused, but he was realizing it was a matter for the police.

"I'll be arrested for this," he stid to himself, "and it's going to be tough to explain."

He looked down again at Annette. Her face was still vindictive, even in death.

For a moment Cavanaugh was tempted to telephone Lent but he gave up the thought. She would hear of it soon enough. Annette, in death, was now a far greater barrier between them than she had been in life.

Oddly enough, Cavanaugh remembered a timber wolf he had once seen with its foot locked in the cruel teeth of a steel trap. The animal could not get away and he had shot it out of pity. He understood now how the wolf must have felt. . Going into his bedroom he picked up the telephone and aroused the sleeping clerk at the desk.

Cavanaugh needs all his nerve now. The installment Monday tells how he faced the police. Don't miss it.

Henri DeGlane Returns to Look Out, Don George! Meets Blue Marvel

Kerry Team Is Ready For Sunday Clash Indians in Distress

By JACK CONWAY

The return of Henri DeGlane to the wrestling wars on June 9 when he will clash with the Blue Masked Marvel at a Paul Bowser show at the Boston Garden will cause a wild commotion in the ranks of our various mat champions.

MR. BOSTON

DeGlane is a former world's champion. He won the title by defeating Strangler Lewis in Montreal. He held it for two years, after which time he lost it to Ed Don George. I do not wish to take away any credit from George, but even Ed would probably admit that his task would not have been such an easy one if the Frenchman had not suffered a broken collar bone during their match. In the opinion of most of the fans who saw the title change hands, DeGlane even in defeat looked to be the better wrestler.

Of course DeGlane's real objective in his next American invasion will be a title contest with George. He will also go after matches with Jim Browning and Jumping Joe Savoldi, but it will be George who will draw most of his early fire.

DeGlane believes he can defeat any wrestler in the world. I listened to him beg Paul Bowser to match him with Jim Londos at the time when the great Greek god was defeating all comers. Henri argued he was 10 years younger than Londos and that he would wear the latter down in a long battle. Bowser refused to make the match because of some personal difference he had with Londos.

Malcewicz, as Masked Marvel, Chased Stecher

Speaking of masked marvels, I shall always remember the time Joe Stecher came to Boston to meet Paul Bowser's masked marvel. Stecher had been led to believe that the masked marvel would be some mediocre opponent who he could conquer easily. Imagine his surprise when Panther Joe Malcewicz entered the ring, ripped a mask from his face and was introduced as the man who would meet Stecher. The latter ran out of the ring, and never stopped until he got to his hotel. Malcewicz claimed Stecher's title and campaigned the country as the new champion.

The latest crop of masked marvels do not pull off their own mask. That is the job for the opposition. The Blue Masked Marvel has been winning from all comers. This fact will not upset DeGlane. The latter would be happy if Londos or George were under the blue mask.

Kerry Gaelic Football Team in Sunday Game

I have yet to see my first game of Gaelic football, but would not miss the clash between the Kerry team and the Massachusetts star outfit at Russell Field, North Cambridge tomorrow. The Kerry players have been here for several days, and have shown amazing form in their workouts. George Finley of Kings Features Syndicate, Inc., saw Kerry and New York play at the Polo Grounds last Sunday. He writes to me as follows:

"You and other good Bostonians should have seen Kerry and New York in that 4-4 tie at the Polo Grounds Sunday. And Tipperary vs. Limerick a-hurlin'! . . . 'Tis the fightin'est fun to be seen away from the Curragh Kildare, and the ghosts of Brian Boru, Ned O'Baldwin, et al must have ridden the breezes off Coogan's Bluff that sunny day.

"Some of those Celtic cheers (Irish cries, to us) must have echoed in the Charles River valley. The 69th Regiment band and kilted pipe-fife-and-drum corps made much martial music for the warriors. What a show a Gaelic football match will prove in the Hub."

After all that, I can hardly wait until they start the Sunday afternoon Gaels.

RECORDS TREMBLE AS COLLEGE SPEEDSTERS RACE

Ben Eastman, front center, seems set for a sprint coming into the stretch in an IC. 800 trial, but Bill Keller, Pitt, won the heat, with Joe Burns, Manhattan, second, and Eastman third, several yards back. Maybe Ben can do better today in the final.

HARRY TOMPKINS KARL WARNER HARRY HOFFMAN

Here is Warner, Yale's great racer, winning a 400 meter trial heat at the Stadium. With Tompkins, U. S. C., second, and Hoffman, N. Y. U., third. The time, 48.8 seconds, was good, considering that the front trio just breezed through.

J.C.Lyman Heaves Iron 52 Ft. 8½ in. in I. C. 4-A. Final

Harvard Stadium, Cambridge, May 27 (AP)—The world record for the shot put was smashed today in the finals of the intercollegiate A. A. A. A. track and field championships when John Lyman, Stanford giant, heaved the 16-pound iron ball a distance of 52 feet 8½ inches. This surpassed the listed world mark of 52 feet 7⅞ inches, made by Heljasz of Poland a year ago.

Lyman, a junior at Stanford making his first real bid for championship honors, also wiped out the intercollegiate mark of 52 feet, ¼ inch, made by Harlow Rothert of Stanford in 1930 at Cambridge.

The record heave, however, was a trifle short of the best American shot put mark, 53 feet ½ inch, made by Leo Sexton, the Olympic champion, last August at Freeport, L. I. Sexton's mark, although standing on the A. A. U. books, has not yet been passed on by the International A. A. F. as a world record.

10,000 IN STADIUM

A crowd of about 10,000 spectators urned out for the finals, in which Southern California and Stanford had the race for team honors to themselves.

The weather in contrast to yesterday's scorcher, was cloudy and cool.

The pole vault brought together the finest field in I. C. A. A. A. history. Bill Miller of Stanford, Olympic champion, did not appear much handicapped by his sore ankle as he easily cleared intermediate heights up to 13 feet.

Keith Brown, Yale's pole vaulting ace, landed among the six high jump finalists by clearing six feet two inches. The others remaining in this competition were Van Osdel and McNaughton of Southern California, Pitkin of Columbia, Woodbury of Dartmouth and Spitz of New York University. Schwegn of Stanford was eliminated after negotiating six feet.

Brown, in two rapid performances, high-jumped six feet three inches and then went over the pole vault bar at 13 feet with plenty to spare.

JEFFERSON INJURED

Duncan McNaughton of U. S. C., who won the Olympic title for Canada last year, was forced into a tie for fourth place in the high jump when he failed to do better than 6 feet 2 inches.

George Jefferson, University of California at Los Angeles, injured a foot in landing after clearing the bar at 13 feet 6 inches. He struck an edge of the concrete base used for the uprights.

The 110-meter high hurdles final was won by Bob Lyon of Southern California in 14.8 seconds by a narrow margin over Gus Meier, Stanford star. The Trojans suffered a setback, however, when Jeddy Welsh was racing with the leaders when he tumbled, picking himself up to complete the journey and collect the point for fifth place.

Third place went to Bailr of Michigan State, who was three yards behind Meier, and Lockwood of Yale finished fourth.

BONTHRON WINS MILE

Although he failed to crack any records, Princeton's great runner, Bill Bonthron, today decisively defeated Joe Mangan of Cornell, the defending champion and a crack field of milers, in the 1500-meter final. Bonthron broke the tape five yards in front of Mangan and eight head of Frank Crowley, Manhattan, in three minutes 54 seconds.

CORNELL WINS SPRINT

Dick Hardy, stocky Cornell sprinter, captured the 100-meter final in a finish so close that the judges made their announcement subject to correction by the official motion pictures. Hardy got away to a substantial lead and without a fast finish by Les Ball of Southern California to win, aparently by a half foot, but the others were closely bunched.

Johnson of Princeton, Maskrey of Penn, and Parsons of Southern California were placed third, fourth and fifth, only after a prolonged pow-wow by the finish judges. Weinstein of New York University was the sixth finalist.

RYAN, PARTNER WIN DOUBLES

Auteuil, France, May 27 (AP)—Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian now living in England, and Mme. Rene Mathier, No. 1 ranking French player, today won the women's doubles title of the French hard court tennis championships, defeating Colette Rosambert and Mme. Henrotin of France in the finals, 6—1, 6—3.

Miss Ryan also shared in the title last year, pairing with Mrs. Wills Moody, who did not compete this year.

The young Australian team of Adrian Quist and Vivian McGrath entered the finals of the men's doubles with a surprise victory over the powerful French Davis Cup combination, Jean Borotra and Jacques Brungnon, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3, 8—3, 6—3.

The courts became so soft under the steady downpour that play was postponed until tomorrow.

BROACA, ELIACE, JOINS YANKS

New Haven, Conn., May 27 (INS)—The New York Yankees will shortly announce the signing of Johnny Broaca, of Lawrence, Mass., Yale's ace pitcher who was dismissed by Coach Joe Wood for insubordination a few weeks back, according to a report on the Yale campus today.

It was said Broacs, whose twirling was largely responsible for Yale's intercollegiate championship last year, probably will join the Yanks in June.

He will get his professional baseball baptism with the Yanks during the summer months, and then return to Yale in the fall for his senior year. Broaca is at present a junior in excellent scholastic standing.

CAPE CODDER IS GOLF WINNER

Philadelphia, May 27 (AP)—Art Pixbee, of Cape Cod, Mass., University of Pennsylvania star golfer, today reached the final round of the annual Ralph Beaver Strassburger Cup Tourney by sweeping to a 5 and 4 victory over David E. Kaye, Jenkintown, Pa., at the Plymouth Country Club.

Bixby, who yesterday eliminated the defending trophy holder, Tommy Goodwin, of Montreal, Que., displayed even more spectacular golf today. Out in even-par, 36, he was six up at the turn, and was one under theoretical perfection for the five holes of the home nine.

Harry Mountain, Jeffersonville, Pa., defeated Clarence Eppinger, Woodbury, N. J., at the 19th hole. Bixbee and Mountain meet for the cup this afternoon.

BRAVES SKID BELOW CUBS

(Special to Boston American)

Chicago, Ill., May 27—The World's Fair opens here today. So the Cubs and Braves will take the afternoon off to attend the ceremonies and make up for the lost time by closing their four-game series in a doubleheader at Wrigley Field tomorrow.

The Tribe expected to enjoy today's ceremonies when they arrived here, but the Cubs got the big kick at the fair. For they are celebrating two victories and the visitors are moaning over two defeats as a result of the first two games of their diamond engagement.

And that isn't all, either. The Warriors came here in fourth place to meet the seventh-place natives. Now the Braves enters as sixth and the Windy City entry is one berth above them.

TWI LEAGUERS STAR ON HILL

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Bill "Chick" O'Donnell of the Junior League Westford Club of Allston and Johnnie McLaughlin of the Raymond Club of the Intersuburban League have started tongues wagging. Young O'Donnell recently pitched a no-hit, no-run game against the McAdoo Club of Cambridge. One man reached first on an error.

McLaughlin so far this season has not been defeated. He is the only twirler in the Intersuburban League, who has not lowered his crest.

SHERIDANS GET LANE

Harry Lane, B. C. Freshman, will twirl for the Sheridan Club of Watertown when college closes. Harry pitched a fine game for Allston, last season. Ed Cousineau, former Boston catcher, who is piloting the Sheridan Club, is sweet on the Eaglet

Speaking of the Sheridan Club it has the unique distinction of having one of the Watertown selectmen, Jim Sheridan, playing on its team. Jim is a utility man. He formerly starred for Georgetown University. Frenchy Brinn of the Newton Club, used to catch Danny MacFayden of the Yankees.

Rosebud Gardens Club will entertain Neponset and St. Augustine in a double-header at the opening of Rosebud Gardens Park, Wayland, tomorrow. The club, which is playing great ball is managed by Jack O'Hara the old New England Leaguer.

Shepard Golfers in Tie With Hovey Linksmen

After opening their drive for the Retail Stores Golf League four-ball championship with a 4 to 2 victory over a makeshift Jordan Marsh Co. team and then losing the odd point to the E. T. Slattery Co. in the second round, the Shepard Stores came back with a 6 to 0 win over Wm. Filene's Sons Co. at the Unicorn Country Club to jump from fourth to a first place tie with the C. F. Hovey Co.

Until meeting the Shepard Stores Filene's had been the leading team, knocking off Conrad's and White's to the tune of 5 to 1, which gave them a three-point lead over Hovey's, Jordan's and Slattery's at the end of the second round.

The Shepard Store quartet went to Unicorn to stop Filens but never suspected that they would whitewash Capt. George Saxe's team.

SHEPARD DUO WIN

John Shepard, 3d, and Robert Shepard blanked George Saxe and Jack Egan. John Shepard went to the turn in an even 40, which included a birdie three at the third hole and he had Saxe and Egan staggering. The latter pair rallied coming in, but to no avail.

In the other Shepard-Filene match, Ben Black, of The Shepard Stores, raced to the turn in 36 on his own ball and with the stroke his partner, H. M. Ulins, contributed, had a better ball of 35, against Jack McCarthy and Bob List. The match ended on the 16th green, with The Shepard Stores pair on the long end of a 3 to 0 victory.

The C. F. Hovey Co. team is the dark horse of the league. Hovey's started off with an even break with Gilchrist at Albemarle, but at Belmont Spring came through with a 4 to 2 win over Conrad.

Then Hovey's pinned a 5 to 1 defeat on the R. H. White Co. and stepped to a first place tie.

Joe Howe and John Roche, the only combination in the league that has won nine points, conquered Charlie Keng and Jack McGregor, while Vice-President D. E. Walsh and H. P. Coyne took two points from Charlie Coyne and Fred McGregor.

WILLIAMS, GERAN, VICTORS

Strengthened by the acquisition of Jerry Geran from Chicago, a six handicap player in Illinois, who paired up with Chauncy S. Williams, the Sears Roebuck Co., staged a fine comeback and took 3 points from the E. T. Slattery Co.

Bill Nugent, Jr., and Henry Bradford did a job on Art Hugueley and Herb Kelly and wound up by taking three points from the Slattery team, which jumped Sears Roebuck from last to fifth place.

After yielding five points to Filene's at Albemarle and losing the odd point to Hovey's in the second round, Conrad & Co. came through with a 5½ to ½ victory over Gilchrist's at Unicorn. Richard Wagner and Dave Moesser took three points from Howard W. Schaschke and Henry Wyman. Lou Ehrlich and Walter Wagner won from Maurice Clark and M. Malmayne, to eamex 2½ points.

HODAPP SECOND IN A. L. BATTING

New York, May 27 (AP)—An injury which kept Sam West of the St. Louis Browns on the bench during the past week made him the major league batting leader.

West will have a chance to drop any points from his .381 average. A shifting of percentages cost most of his former rivals their places and brought new rivals into the picture.

First place in the N. L. went today to Pepper Martin of the Cardinals, who had a .362 average. Frederick, in second place, had a .362 mark.

Johnny Hodapp of the Red Sox brought his average from .323 to .374 to take second place in the American League.

MARY PARKINSON WINS W. G. A. GOLF CROWN

MRS. PRUNARET IS VICTIM OF YOUNGSTER

By BILL GRIMES

In her third Massachusetts W. G. A. championship tournament, Miss Mary Parkinson of the Dedham Polo and Country Club won the title by defeating Mrs. H. F. Prunaret, Jr., of the home club, 1 up in the finals at the Charles River Country Club.

Miss Parkinson was out in 40, and 3 up, and she came back in 45 for an 85. Mrs. Prunaret took 43 strokes to negotiate the outward round and came home in 43 for an 86.

After trailing three holes at the turn, Mrs. Prunaret squared the match at the 13th, but dropped one down again at the long 15th where she took a 7, and held for the remainder of the round.

PLAYED STEADY GOLF

With the exception of her work on the green, where at times she was unsteady, Miss Parkinson played very fine golf. Her drives were usually long and unusually straight. There was plenty of distance to her second shots, whether played with woods or irons.

Mrs. Prunaret, on the other hand, was unsteady off the tees. In fact, with the exception of the 13th and 16th holes, Mrs. Prunaret did not hit a good drive.

She started by pulling her tee shots, then when she started to steer them, she was again in trouble. As Mrs. Prunaret is rated as one of the steadiest in the association, it was a fine tribute to her courage that she was able to keep the match going for 18 holes.

Miss Parkinson made her first appearance in W. G. A. championships four years ago at Braeburn. Here, after qualifying, she was eliminated by Miss Rosamond Vahey. She qualified last year at Andover, where again she was a first round victim.

4TH STATE CHAMPIONSHIP

Mrs. Prunaret was playing her fourth state championship. She failed to qualify in 1928 at Woodland, but reached match play four years ago at Charles River, and her best showing, prior to this tournament, was at Salem where she went to the third round with Miss Dorothy Richards in 1930.

In 1931 Mrs. Prinaret was the medalist at Braeburn, but was beaten by Miss Eleanor Peterson, she did not participate last year at Andover.

Going to the first hole, Miss Parkinson was trapped in two, but reached the green from the hazard when her ball caromed off the bank. She halved the hole as Mrs. Prunaret needed three to get on and took two putts.

Miss Parkinson had trouble going down the second, and hooked her third into the trap, and lost the hole to a half stymie by her opponent.

After they had halved the next three holes, Mrs. Prunaret scored on her way to 2 down, when she pushed her shot back of the knoll of the sixth green.

Mrs. Prunaret missed two shots in the rough before she got on, and Miss Parkinson won the hole with a regulation four.

BOTH EVEN ON 7TH

Three putts on the 7th cost Miss Parkinson a win. Mrs. Prunaret topped her drive and had played four when she reached the green. The hole was halved with sixes. They were both on the green with threes, but another missed putt cost Miss Parkinson the hole, which was halved.

A flubbed second shot from the knoll at the foot of the ninth green put Mrs. Prunaret three down at the turn. Miss Parkinson pitched dead and dropped her putt for a three.

Although Mrs. Prunaret was trapped with her second going to the tenth, and her opponent was in the woods, she got a five for a win as Mrs. Parkinson flubbed her fourth, finishing in 7.

Following a half at the short 11th, Miss Parkinson lost the 12th when she was home with her second. Mrs. Prunaret pitched short due to a shanked second and Mrs. Prunaret canned a 10 footer for a four.

MATCH EVEN AT 14TH

Going to the 13th, Mrs. Prunaret was just short in two, while Miss Parkinson was in the rough at the foot of the hill, and went to the edge of the green from where she needed three to get down and lost to a five. Miss Parkinson chipped dead on the 14th to halve with one putt, and with the match all even, they started the long 15th.

Here Mrs. Prunaret topped her drive into the rough, and put her second in a trap in the fairway. Miss Parkinson was short in two. Mrs. Prunaret was short of the green in three. Miss Parkinson was the hole to be one up again.

They halved the 16th with fives and lost Mrs. Prunaret missed a putt for a win at the 17th, where Miss Parkinson flubbed her second shot,but managed to halve the hole.

Going to the home hole, Miss Parkinson was just short in three with Mrs. Prunaret hole high. Miss Parkinson chipped and left herself a 15 footer, and Mrs. Prunaret half topped a chip shot to halve the hole with sixes, giving Miss Parkinson the title.

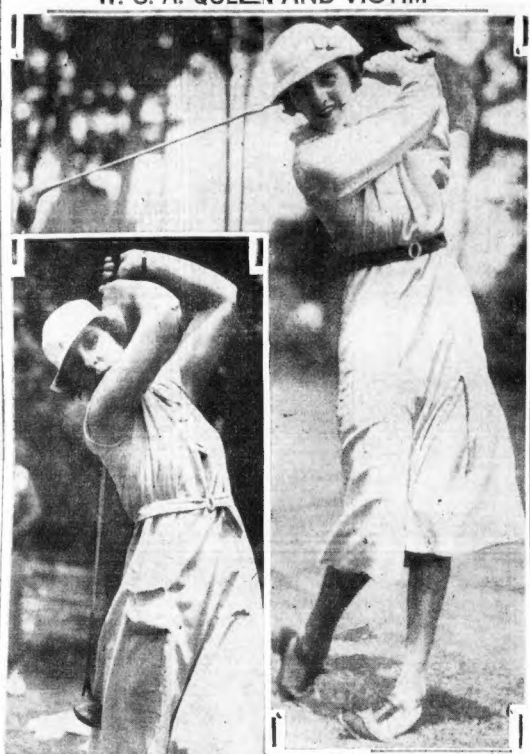
W. G. A. QUEEN AND VICTIM



MRS. HENRI F. PRUNARET, JR.

MISS MARY PARKINSON

Miss Mary Parkinson, Dedham, was today declared queen of all W. G. A. golfers at the Charles River Country Club when she defeated Mrs. Henri Prunaret of the home club 1 up in one of the most exciting golf finals ever witnessed on the local course.

Diamond Dust

Both major league races had tightened up one full game today, as the Yanks lost to the White Sox and the Pirates fell before the Giants.

The New Yorkers' lead in the American League flag struggle was reduced to one game when the Clsox pounded Charlie Ruffing and Danny MacFayden for 15 hits in a row, 5 to 8, and gain undisputed possesion of third place.

The second-place Senators scored four runs in the first inning and fully whipped the Browns, 5 to 2, in a game that was halted by rain after seven innings. Earl Whitehill held the Browns to four safeties.

Giants Move Up

The second-place Giants drew within two games of the roof of the National League by taking the league-leading Bucs into camp, 6 to 5. A home run by Gus Mancuso provided the Terrymen with their margin of victory in the eighth after Blondy Ryan of Lynn had kept them in the running with a circus catch.

The Cardinals advanced to within three games of the National League lead when Dizzy Dean set down the Phillies, 5 to 4. Dizzy was found for 14 hits, including a home run, triple, double and single by Chuck Klein, but fanned eight and was tight in the pinches. Klein's homer was his tenth of the season, which puts him in a tie with Wally Berger. Martin and Whitney also hit for the circuit.

Rick Ferrell snapped out of his hitting slump to make three safeties in four times at bat for the Red Sox in the second game against the Indians.

Savoldi Kicks Lutze to Defeat in Mat Go

By JACK CONWAY

Jumping Joe Savoldi used his famous Notre Dame drop kick to down Nick Lutze in 31m. 19s. before 8000 persons at a Paul Bowser show at the Boston Garden.

Savoldi drove Lutze to the canvas with such terrific force that the colorful Californian was unable to resume mat warfare.

Lutze had the better of the tussle up to the time Savoldi made his wild leap in the air and crashed his feet against his opponent's chest.

It was a hard, stirring contest. Lutze's experience and marvelous speed enabled him to baffle Lutze with arm locks and heel locks.

LUTZE SOCKS FOE

In the early stages of the match, Savoldi resorted to football tactics. He rushed Lutze and forced him back by scoring with butts. This style of battle enraged Nick. He waited his opportunity. As Savoldi came plunging forward, Lutze stepped back quickly and turned. Jumping Joe around with a swell directed right hand uppercut to the jaw. Lutze was once a heavyweight boxer, and he still tosses a mean right hand smash.

Lutze later resorted to heel locks. The plunging Savoldi did not have any defense for this hold, and was knocked down repeatedly. Lutze got a bit careless and left an opening for Savoldi. Like a bolt out of the blue, Savoldi leaped in the air and used his Notre Dame drop kick to score what proved the only fall of the match in 31m. 19s.

Lutze was in poor condition when he reached his dressing room. He complained of a pain in his chest where he had been kicked. His doctor advised against his resuming wrestling. Sam Smith then declared Savoldi the winner.

Red Krogh of Chicago won from George Jenkins of Kentucky in 4m. 43s. with a body lift and slam. Rolland Kirschmeyer of Oklahoma and Buck Weaver of Chicago were even at the end of five minutes of milling.

KAZANJIAN VICTOR

John Spellman of Brown and Wallace Muscovitch of Lithuania went 10 minutes to a draw.

B. C. YEARLINGS VICTORS OVER ENGLISH HIGH

Coach Joe Shea's Boston College freshman team continued on their winning streak by taking the English high into camp, 14-9, this morning at University Heights in a weird seven-inning game.

The Blue and Blue had a 9-3 lead on the Eaglets at the end of the third frame, then the big guns of the Chestnut Hill team began to roar and Charley Mazer, the one-armed hurler, started to mow down the intown batters.

George Mahoney and Ed Flaherty of the Eaglets and Ed Wall of the English High team wafted triples while George Maiocca connected for four bingles during the course of the tilt, besides scoring three of the runs.

The big innings for the freshman outfit came in the last two chukkers when they tallied 11 times to overcome the big lead established by the Blue and Blue.

KERRY TEAM TILTS HERE

AGE FIFTEENS FIT FOR CLASH TOMORROW

The Kerry Gaelic football team making an extended tour of the U. S., played an exhibition contest 15 chosen from the Mass. Gaelic teams at Russell Field, North Cambridge tomorrow afternoon. A crowd of 20,000 is expected to witness the struggle.

The Kerry team is the premier entrie in the Gaelic sport and has won the championship of Ireland for the past nine years, a record unequalled in the history of the sport.

The Kerry lads have made their debut at New York on Sunday and 50,000 fans saw them hold the New York all star team to a 4 to 4 tie.

Dissatisfied with the performance, Manager McCarthy of the Kerry team rushed his squad to this city, where he put his squad in training at Smith Field, Brighton. Today he said his charges were ready for the Bay State team.

Mike Doyle, Jack Ryan, Tom O'Donnell, John Joe Landers, Jack Walsh and Pat Whitty are outstanding Kerry players.

The local team, organized more than a month ago has been practising hard. Johnny Cooney, Tommy Cooney, Mike Dalton, Jack Dacey, Marty Higgins, Jack Begley, Joe Walsh, Owen Mahon and Tim Finnegan are stars of the home fifteen.

There will be a preliminary hurling game between the Galway and Finbar hurling teams which gets underway at 2 p. m.

Hub Sunday Night Hour Honors Army, Navy and Marines Over WEEI Waves

By N. E. T.

There are any number of spirited and [illegible] Memorial Day periods scheduled over the air channels of all stations between now and next Tuesday, but none seems quite so [illegible] as the gala program under Rolfe Newman's direction [illegible] through WEEI tomorrow night from 8 until 9 o'clock.

During the 60 minutes a special salute to the Army, Navy and Marine Corps is featured in a musical way, with the Newman orchestra and Del Castillo at the console playing "Tribute to an American Soldier" in synchronism. Wilma Morris, the sweet soprano voice heard regularly with this group on Sunday nights, offers Eric Coates' ballad, "I Heard You Singing" as an added highlight. From beginning to end the hour promises an exceptional loudspeaker treat.

STRIKING STORY

Among the week-end radio recommendations [illegible] Lucas N. E. T. has in mind to emphasize at 9 tonight [illegible] known Great [illegible] being [illegible] Sunday evening. WBZ WBZA at 8:30 by Dean's Room [illegible] are certainly among the outstanding efforts being put forth [illegible] ter-young generation [illegible] Mr. Ryan has stated today that his biography for tomorrow evening [illegible] one of the best and most impressive he has ever broadcast. [illegible] soon as beautiful a subject as he has ever delivered during his career as a public speaker. Those who have heard him and know the power of his descriptive delivery will readily concede such actually means more than just a little. But by not revealing who his subject is to be he carries out the Unknown Great theme. Thus we co-operate by not revealing the name of the figure about to be treated. Suffice to say, however, that the story of a side-ed boy, a woman with the tenacity and courage of a strong man, yet likewise possessing the tenderness of a [illegible] angel in her philanthropic activity, Unmistakably she aided in uplifting countless people and graced [illegible] modern civilization.

Maj. Gen. Paul Malone, U. S. A. [illegible] this evening (WBZ) from the Hub Broadcasting studios to deliver a Memorial Day message, of interest to army and navy veterans and their families. Col. C. A. Trott, chief of staff of the 94th Division in Boston, will introduce General Malone.

RETURN OF THE NATIVE

(Lamar Mc Donald)

General Redeal's house caught fire, just after he'd been fined $7.60 in justice court. The court granted the General a moment's liberty to get his car out of the garage which stood near the burning house. That was the last the sheriff saw of the General until he came in last Thursday evening. He said when he ran away the other day he went down into Arkansas. He hadn't been there but a very short time until he decided that the jail would be a better place to stay than where he was.

RING OUT, GLAD BELLS

Berlin—General Ma Chanshan, Chinese war lord, who was first reported to have gone over to the Japanese for a $3,000,000 bribe and later officially reported killed by the Japanese, last week bobbed up here. He received correspondents and announced he would go back and continue to fight for dap nese.

It's nice to know that General Ma still live and kicking.
For General Ma is a general whom we'd like to see keep sticking.
He has superiors perhaps, in military matches
But there's no general better at inspiring news dispatches.

All trite remarks on rolling stones leave General Ma a scoffer:
He can be bribed, but only till he gets a better offer.
For seeing good in everyone, he never will refuse it—
And either puts it in the bank or finds a way to use it.

Oh, General Ma has many decks and well he plays his cards.
All contributions he accepts and gives all his regards.
In fact, there can't be very much wrong in the Chinese nation
As long as General M is back—in rapid circulation.

LEADERS SOAR TO 8 POINTS; TRADING BIG

New York, May 27—The stock market in Wall Street swept upward in one of the largest waves of buying in its history in today's week-end session. Gains ranged from 1 to 10 points or more in scores of issues.

The turnover for the two-hour session was over the 4,000,000 share mark, sending the high speed ticker 45 minutes behind actual transaction.

BONDS ARE FIRM

Bonds were firm, with secondary liens strong. Cotton closed up 85 cents to $1.10 a bale. Grain rose sharply. Silver was up 2 cents an ounce.

A new inflationary frenzy developed over the administration's proposed legislation to void gold clauses in public and private obligations, to this in itself was regarded as only recognizing the existing situation, Wall Street buzzed with inflationary gossip, including the possibility of establishment here of an open market for gold, permitting its price to advance above the legal level of 20.67 an ounce.

Buying swept through virtually all categories of shares, and commodities surged up as well. The bond market was not in the main adversely influenced by the gold clause proposal, although some of the U. S. Government issues dipped a little.

CLOSE NEAR HIGHS

Profit taking occasionally swept over the markets, but final prices in stocks were in the main not far from the top. Gold stocks had a wild flurry. Homestake, which jumped 17 points yesterday, added another 8 points to its advance today, then slid off a few points as traders took profits.

Issues getting up 4 to 6 points included American Telephone, du Pont, Union Pacific, U. S. Steel preferred, and American Metals, while those up about 2 to 3 included American Can, American Smelting, Allied Chemical, Case, U. S. Steel common, United Aircraft, and others.

Amerada, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward were among shares up around a point.

The volume today was the second largest Saturday on record. The previous high mark for a short session was set May 3, 1930, when 4,467,500 shares changed hands.

Reaction of the markets to the gold clause proposals were regarded as a disappointment, although some, however, coming in the same week that the Federal Reserve System has started its credit expansion program, left the distinct impression in financial quarters that purchases by most commodity users would be persistently pursued until the objectives are reached.

Addition to the inflationary flurry was further encouraging business news. Most brokerage quarters remained highly bullish, although some again warned that the advance may be outstripping prospective business recovery for the near future, at least. The freight car loadings report showed a still better gain over the like week of last year, and was up 16 8 per cent, against 2.6 per cent last week.

The dollar plunged in foreign exchange dealings, although it did not get down to its low since the United States departed from the gold standard. Sterling rose nearly 9 cents to $3.97½, and francs 19 points to 4.66 cents.

Stocks Finish Strong in Boston Market

Share prices were boomed 1 to more than 3 points in active trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Several issues sold in new high territory with best gains being recorded in the utility group. American Telephone was the feature of the session showing a gain of almost 4 points at its closing price of 117¾.

Grains Are Higher at Chicago Close

Chicago, May 27 (AP)—Grains swept sharply higher in price today following official announcement that the country would go off the gold standard by statute. Wheat opened as much as four cents a bushel higher on the December delivery, but the opening bulge was the maximum for the day. Then cessation of the season's highest level, 79¼ cents a bushel. Other grains were also swept upward with initial prices generally the day's highest.

The Income Tax—An Immense Nationwide Racket

RECENT revelations concerning the devious methods whereby some of the nation's wealthiest citizens went scot free of the income tax make an empty gesture indeed of the Congressional slogan, "Soak the Rich."

As a matter of fact, the income tax is an immense nationwide racket, in which the multimillionaires frequently escape burdens, which fall with unbearable severity on the shoulders of men of moderate means—the great professional and salaried classes.

All through the depression, it has been apparent to competent students of taxation that the Federal Government needed new and more reliable sources of taxation.

Yet a revolt among the ignorant and ill informed in Congress defeated the wisely conceived manufacturers' sales tax in the last session of Congress.

While hypocritical legislators were yelling "Soak the Rich," J. P. Morgan and his 19 partners found ways to avoid paying any income tax at all to the United States Government in 1931 and in 1932.

In the aggregate, they paid only $48,000 in 1930. It was explained that taxable income was offset with capital losses.

Meantime, another Wall Street leader, Charles E. Mitchell, former chairman of the National City Bank, is up on criminal charges in connection with alleged avoidance of income taxes in 1929 and 1930.

Likewise, there has been a demand to investigate the tax returns of Andrew W. Mellon, Pittsburgh Croesus and former Secretary of the Treasury.

While the middle classes almost break their backs carrying the load of excessive governmental imposts, billionaires find loopholes for escape by purchasing tax-exempt bonds and in other ways.

IT IS A SORRY SPECTACLE.

* * *

IN times of depression, the income tax results in revenues so inadequate that huge deficits are inevitably built up.

But the moral aspect is as revolting as the economic inadequacy of the existing system.

The income tax tends to become a racket in which the Government tries to rob the citizens and the citizens in turn are tempted to cheat the Government.

The sad part of the racket is that the Government succeeds in robbing the average citizen, but powerful citizens succeed in escaping.

Numerous ultra wealthy men who can afford to hire skillful lawyers or who have the unscrupulous shrewdness to invest in tax-exempt securities, pay no income taxes at all or else pay ridiculously and outrageously inadequate taxes.

As the powerful avoid taxes, the full weight of the Government fiscal burdens falls on the smaller income taxpayer.

The Ways and Means Committee of the present House of Representatives foolishly has recommended that the burden on the lowest bracket of income taxpayers be increased by one-half.

Thus it appears that the government is just as ruthless and unjust towards the average uninfluential income taxpayer as it is servile and cringing and, as a matter of fact, sometimes crooked to the important and powerful tax dodger.

As William Randolph Hearst pointed out in his message to the Senate Committee investigating the depression, the income tax is, like prohibition, one of the two great war-time mistakes.

* * *

MR. HEARST has described the income tax "as the cause of much immorality, dishonesty and injustice as Prohibition has been."

Mr. Hearst has recommended that "the whole income tax system should be abolished. It is a dishonest, demoralizing, disgraceful racket and furthermore it is an unbearable burden upon the community, destroying purchasing power, intensifying the depression and making citizenship less trustful regarding the wisdom and honesty and justice of their government and consequently less loyal to government.

"An unjust and oppressive income tax destroys the equality and impartiality which is the basis of democracy and paves the way for Communism or Bolshevism which is created by disbelief in social justice and distrust of government."

The present Congress can contribute notably to business recovery and ultimate thoroughgoing tax reform by inaugurating the GENERAL MANUFACTURERS' SALES TAX, WHICH HAS SUCCEEDED SO ADMIRABLY IN CANADA.

Meddling About

While the Administration meddles about at Geneva in the morass of internationalism and the mire of European politics, it continues to cripple the various arms of the national defense at home in the name of "economy."

An Administration about-face having saved the high-seas battle fleet from being shelved one-third at a time, in "rotating reserve," it is now proposed to "save" money in the Navy by transferring many officers, including especially medical, engineering and technically trained men, to administrative or technical positions in the public works, relief or reforestation agencies

This move can only operate to hamstring the fleet's efficiency and to impair the morale of the personnel.

And what earthly use is there to discharge men from the Navy and project them into the ranks of the unemployed, or put them on other kinds of government work? It's like a dog chasing his tail—there is a lot of energy expended and nobody gets anywhere.

It was at least hoped by the supporters of Mr. Roosevelt during the campaign that, having been an assistant secretary of the navy, he would have interest in building up the Navy, and many patriotic citizens supported him on that account who were disgusted with Republican neglect of the Navy.

That hope found further encouragement when Mr. Roosevelt declared that he was going to build our Navy up to treaty strength.

Now we see the Administration more disposed to meddle in Europe than to mind its own business at home.

Just Folks

Encouragement

His wife has taken him by the hand
And led him to look at the world outside
And their children gay in a box of sand
And the tulips red 'neath the window wide.
She has shown him the green grass and the trees,
The small church steeple over the way,
And bade him look on such joys as these
And hearten himself for the troubled day.

She has strengthened him with her lovely arm
And kissed his furrowed and worried cheek.
She talked to him of the great world's charm,
And his eyes grow brighter as he hears her speak.
"There is joy to come; there is pride to know.
We shall laugh once more before very long.
Soon shall the care of the present go."
And the man remembers he must be strong.

"Together the burden of life we'll share;
Together the peace of the world we'll find!
Hark to the birds who are singing there!
To the glory of life do not now grow blind!"
He kisses her lips and he strokes her hair,
Looks at his children at play, and then,
With courage renewed and with shoulders square,
Goes back to life with good heart again.

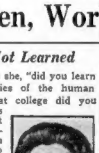
Lived, Not Learned

"HOW," says she, "did you learn all the mysteries of the human heart? In what college did you study the follies and tragedies of human weakness, which you seem to know so well?"

And of course she expects me to tell her that I learned it all in Vienna, or some other highbrow center. Which naturally would boost my journalistic stock plenty! But being an honest mood today, I'm going to tell her the truth instead, come what may. So here goes!



Elsie Robinson

Where did I learn all the 57 varieties of human cussedness?

I didn't LEARN them, lady; I LIVED 'em.

How come I have the low-down on liars and cowards, bullies and boasters, fools and fakers?

Because I've been all those things myself.

Why did I know the wastefulness of remorse, the selfishness of grief, the dry rot of sentimentality—and all the other secret blights that sap our courage and wreck our honor?

Because I've used them.

In what college did I study human weakness, human meanness I'rman swinishness?

In the toughest, but the most thorough, college on earth—THE COLLEGE OF MY OWN LIFE.

If you want to know about people, you can find all the dope in—YOURSELF. And I mean exactly that—ALL the dope. For there's no impulse in any life that isn't also in you, to some degree. There's no lovely impulse toward beauty, and no dirty desire for ugliness, which hasn't its seed in you—as well as in the murderer and the thief behind the bars.

You aren't just you—one individual—John Jones or Mary Brown. You're everybody. You're all the human beings that ever have lived. And in you there is the record of all their hate and love, their lust and fear, their pride and cruelty.

There's the record, right within you—plain for you to read. More knowledge, in your own character, than a hundred college courses could ever give you.

But have you the nerve to face that record?

Have you ever even started to read it?

Have you ever wanted to know the truth about yourself?

If you have, you're one in a million—for the truth about ourselves is the last thing most of us want to learn. Outwardly we may seem to be honest men and women. We may meet the facts of life with courage and intelligence. But when it comes to our secret dealings with our own spirits, we'll resort to every petty pretense, shifty evasion and downright lie, to coddle ourselves along.

You don't believe it? Then watch yourself the next time you pull a boner. See how quickly you put the blame on the other fellow!

Then you wonder why you continue to get into jams. You envy us scribblers who seem to know so well the whys and wherefores of human behavior. You wish that you, too, knew as much about life.

You can know as much about life. You can begin to know it as soon as you're willing. The bitter knowledge is ready and waiting—right in your own silly soul.

BUT HAVE YOU THE NERVE TO TAKE IT?

New York Day by Day

Tender Letter

NEW YORK, May 27.—Recently I spoke casually of a tender letter from a little blind girl that evoked a choke. A number asked me to print it, and, securing her consent but a request that it be unsigned, it is reproduced herewith, with only a few minor elisions:

"Yesterday was my sixteenth birthday and my sixth year in the dark. My Aunt invited sixteen very good friends to tea O. O. McIntyre and you were so nice to send me the books which are being read. I am going to try to tell you what a happy time we had.

"It was such a summery day that at the last moment we decided that instead of gathering in the house we would hold the party on the lawn. At first I was timid about the lawn, for sometimes I bump into the trees. It doesn't embarrass me, but those who see.

"I really wanted them to play games, backgammon, anagrams and such, but all suggested we just talk, which I think was very thoughtful. Although I really am quite happy if others about me are enjoying themselves. I don't like to feel I am cramping their style.

* * *

"I told them about the time I went to see the river-boat show at S. I was just nine and fell in love with the villain of the play. He wore riding boots and a sombrero and between acts sang as he walked down the aisle. When he passed me he patted by head. I felt like the shepherdess chucked by a wicked young squire. For many weeks he was my dream prince. Some one inquired: 'Did you ever see him again?'—then stopped and there was a hush. I feel sorry the speaker was embarrassed. Those sudden gaps make everybody self conscious.

"This letter I suppose sounds like Miss Pollyanna but you happen to know I am blind and it is difficult to make people underatand that I am not unhappy without emphasizing happiness. But to get back to the party. We had a fruit salad, cakes, tea and lemonade and more talk and one of the girls played a ukulele accompaniment while we all sang songs that are probably old to New York, but somewhat new here.

* * *

"They must have had a good time for they remained until Uncle came. After our dinner we sat on the porch and I retold the things we said and did during the afternoon. Now up in my room I am writing them to you also to thank you again for the books.

"I have a special liking for newspaper people. My Dad was one and my mother was always trying to write poetry she couldn't sell. It is one of the greatest comforts that they went to Heaven before this happened. It would have broken their hearts to know. Or do they know? I often wonder. I was much interested in having read to me a description of the Music Hall in Radio City. Is it really true that the ceiling changes colors while the big orchestra is playing? I've always been, as you say in your articles, 'a fool for colors'.

* * *

"The biggest city I ever visited was Buffalo and mother took me to see Niagara Falls. A huge rainbow seemed to hang over it and mother used to tell me how I jumped up and down clapping my hands delightedly with tears running down by cheeks, yelling 'Wain-Woh.' Aunt just called up stairs: 'You must get your sleep, dear!' so I'm going to tell you about Brixey and, as they say on the radio, sign off.

* * *

"Brixey is my white spitz. He is not conscious of my handicap and if I knock over anything or stumble he thinks it is a signal to play and dashes around barking like he does when I throw his ball. He likes to rough-house. But he has an uncanny sense. If anybody is at home save myself no stranger can come near the porch but if there are people about he pays absolutely no attention to a living soul.

* * *

"This is all if you have had patience to read so rambling a letter. I wish you joy. O, yes aren't Mr. Rogers and Mr. Cobb amusing on the radio?"

The Daddy of Radio

You Never Heard of Him

We are accustomed to consider radio broadcasting as a comparatively recent invention. Mr. Joseph Nathan Kane, compiler of "Famous First Facts," is authority, however, for the statement that the first broadcast actually took place in 1892.

The story goes that one Nathan B. Stubblefield constructed a gadget which even in those early days permitted the transmission of the voice through the ether without the aid of wires.

It is also said that he gave a public exhibition of his invention on Jan. 1, 1902, and another on May 30 of the same year at Fairmount Park, Philadelphia.

The account seems authentic, for it is recorded that Stubblefield obtained a patent (No. 887,357) on his device on May 12, 1908. But he was unable to get the millions that he asked from manufacturers for the rights to it, and never parted with it.

Thus, the name of Stubblefield is unknown to the millions who comprise the "unseen audience," instead of being ranked with Edison or Marconi.
